BRIAND PEACE POLICIES GIVEN NEW APPROVAL

Chamber of Deputies, by Vote of 298 to 263, Voices Favor.

LAVAL HEAPS PRAISE ON FOREIGN MINISTER

Action Comes After Attack by Bouillon on War Role of Henderson.

Paris, May 28 (A.P.).—The peace policies of Aristide Briand and of Premier Pierre Laval's government as a whole received a new indorsement in the Chamber of Deputies tonight when a cabinet-sponsored motion of approval was carried by 298 votes to 263.

The real test, however, came earlier in the evening when M. Laval asked the chamber not to grant priority to the powerful radical group's resolution. The motion, while approving the foreign minister's actions at Geneva and elsewhere, denied the same approval to the government as a whole.

In this the house upheld the premier by a vote of 318 to 261.

On the phrase "confidence in it" in the government-sponsored resolution, on which the deputies voted separately, M. Laval and M. Briand won by 319 to 257, giving them a technical majority of 62.

In one of the oratorical flights which have made him famous, M. Briand said that while he had been "dragged in the mud" by his adversaries, he had received many encouragements to persevere, notably from former soldiers.

Given Necessary Courage.

"These have given me the necessary courage," he added.

The foreign minister indignantly refuted a report that his cabinet colleagues had voted against him at Versailles and said the result of the presidential election was not a condemnation of France's peace policies.

He added that the man who was elected president, Paul Doumer, is "a good Frenchman, profoundly attached to our republican institutions."

M. Laval backed his foreign minister solidly, saying there is no difference between M. Briand's policy and that of the government itself. He flayed the radical left opposition for trying to bring internal politics into discussion of France's action abroad.

The premier warned the deputies of the danger of overthrowing his government at this particular time. He referred to a motion of confidence carried May 8, which covered M. Briand's foreign policy, notably in connection with the proposed Austro-German customs union.

Always Been Faithful.

He maintained that the foreign minister had carried out the chamber's mission to Geneva satisfatcorily.

"My majority has always been faithful to me and I have never betrayed it," the sturdy little prime minister declared. "The government's foreign policy is not at stake; there is no difference between it and M. Briand's policy."

M. Laval was liberally applauded by the center and right benches, but the left seats were aloof.

"When the general disarmament conference convenes in 1932, we will present ourselves anew before the chamber for a new mandate," he said, indicating he believed his government would last until then.

Earlier in the day Franklin Bouillon, bitter political opponent of M. Briand, had thrown the House in an uproar by his attack of the handling of the Austro-German trade proposal at Geneva. He insisted the foreign minister should have attacked the projected treaty from a political and not an economic standpoint.

Choice of Henderson Hit.

He also criticized the selection of Arthur Henderson, British foreign minister, as chairman of next year's disarmament conference, saying the Englishman's war-time role was "open to suspicion."

The weary Chamber later voted approval of the complete government-favored resolution, implying confidence, by 332 to 256. It then adjourned until tomorrow afternoon.

Referring to Franco-Italian relations, M. Briand said:

"Italy is a great nation, having her own viewpoint, but she has supported the French viewpoint whenever it was possible for her to do so.

"Our relations with that country are evolving towards complete agreement. Thanks to the good will between the two nations, I am firmly convinced that difficulties which we may encounter will be overcome."

Parcel Post Hearing Postponed Until Fall

(Associated Press.)

Hearings on Postmaster General Brown's proposal to revise parcel post rates were postponed yesterday by the Interstate Commerce Commission until next fall.

At the same time Commissioner Tate separated from the rate question the Postmaster General's petition for approval of an increase in size and weight of packages. A hearing on this will be held June 9.

600 Planes Will Roar Over City Tomorrow

Army's Air Armada to Begin Program of Demonstration and Review at 11:30; Vanguard to Arrive This Afternoon.

The Army's big air demonstration and review over Washington tomorrow will start at 11:30 o'clock, the War Department announced yesterday. Originally, the demonstration was scheduled to start at 12:30. The change was made so that the roar of the planes would not interfere with memorial exercises in Arlington National Cemetery.

The city will view the vanguard of the Army's air armada in its first venture as a complete unit below the Mason-Dixon line some time after 1 o'clock this afternoon, coming here from the Philadelphia area.

The 600 or more planes to take part in this demonstration and review here will scatter through this section today, with Bolling Field to handle the largest single allotment—almost 280 pursuit and division headquarters planes. Langley Field, Va., will handle many of the bombardment and a few observation planes; Middletown, Pa., will take care of the transport planes; and both attack and observation craft will maneuver over Washington in the air show tomorrow from Logan Field, Baltimore, and Bellanca Airport, Wilmington.

The air program also has been shortened somewhat, the War Department announced. At first, it was to start at 12:30 and last until 2. Under the new plans, it will last an hour—from 11:30 to 12:30.

The program will be abbreviated by reducing the time allotted for the first feature, the combat demonstration.

Tomorrow all of these planes will gather in the air at a designated spot and fly over the city. The best place from which to witness the spectacle, Army men say, will be Potomac Park in the vicinity of the Arlington Memorial Bridge.

The combat demonstration will be given over the Potomac River, from the Arlington Memorial Bridge to the Highway Bridge.

In the grand review the armada will fly over the river.

U. S. GAINS 2-0 LEAD IN DAVIS CUP MATCH

2,100 See Shields and Wood Repulse Argentinians in Opening Singles.

By BOB CONSIDINE.

America took a decisive step closer to that day when it may once more challenge France for the greatest of all amateur prizes—the Davis Cup—yesterday afternoon at the Chevy Chase Club, when two bronzed 20-year-old youngsters, Frank Shields and Sidney Wood, jr., put to rout the best of the Argentines, Guillermo Robson and Ronaldo Boyd, in two thrilling singles matches before a tense crowd of international celebrities in social and official life. Twenty-one hundred saw the matches fought out to their stirring finales under virtually Utopian conditions.

Today, in an effort to clinch the series by means of a third straight victory, Bernon S. Prentice, nonplaying captain of the American team, has renominated his singles stars of yesterday to take up the burden in doubles against the South American team of Lucilio del Castillo and Adriano Zappa, doubles champions of Argentina.

Like two young dervishes Shields and Wood went out after their older antagonists yesterday. Shields, huge and virile, did away with Robson, 3—6, 6—2, 6—2, 6—2, while Sidney Wood, a mere slip of a youth, with a great mop of yellow hair for a roof, wrought the downfall of the 210-pound Boyd to the tune of 6—4, 6—1, 6—2, in as craftsmanlike a manner as historians assure us that David won his match over the hard-serving Goliath.

The South Americans offered stout opposition down to where the last ball had bounced twice. Winner of the first Davis Cup South American zone by virtue of victories over Paraguay, Uruguay and Chile, Argentina yesterday performed in the manner of champions, and late last night was far from chastened by the treatment received at the hands of two native youths, the bulk of whose playing has been done in this country alone.

A victory today for the United States, and the betting bourses should ask odds of a bout 1 to 4, would give the United States undisputed court sovereigty over the Americas for the first time since England and the United States decided that after all they should let other nations try for Mr. Davis' imposing array of silverware. The United States, with the ghosts of Larned, Wright, Little, McLaughlin, Williams, Johnson and Tilden standing by at attention, has always won the American zone, but never has a nation on the southern bank of the canal been played.

That the first inter-American court conflict reaches a crescendo today as United States hopes promise to be carried to victory on the doubles court. A victory today will give this country the necessary three matches

CITY GAMING HALTS AHEAD OF LAW TRIO

Three Detectives Find All Is Tranquil on Tour of Downtown Area.

All was quiet on Washington's gambling front yesterday.

Three detective sergeants, still "looking for a couple of fellows," visited fifteen gaming establishments during the day, but none of them was operating.

Only one speakeasy, on Ninth street, near E street, was occupied when the detectives arrived. But while they were trying to obtain entrance the habitues fled over roofs and donw fire escapes to the street.

In most instances where places were visited, the detectives found the operators outside of the premises. As detectives approached, they opened doors for them to enter. All that they found were bare walls, with no evidence of any gaming in progress.

The detectives made a systematic canvass of Seventh street, Ninth street, New York avenue, and D street. Most of the frequenters of the houses cluttered up adjacent sidewalks. Apparently the activities of the detectives caused a depression in the bookmaking enterprises.

The three detective sergeants, H. E. Ogle, Larry O'Dea and Arthur Fihelly, were balked in an attempt to enter a speakeasy on Ninth street. As they entered a lower door, lights were automatically lighted and detectives found themselves under the scrutiny of two eyes, that peered from a peep-hole in a door at the top of the stairs.

As glass crashed behind the door, which sounded auspiciously like the breaking of bottles, the frequenters climbed to the roof and beat a hasty retreat to the street.

By way of diversion, the detectives visited a second-hand store and confiscated a submachine gun, which had been sold the night before. On the thought that it might have been the gun used in the aborted holdup of the First National Bank at Upper Marlboro several weeks ago, the detectives bought it to headquarters.

It developed that the gun had been sold by a disgruntled employe of a machine gun manufacturer, who had difficulties with his employer regarding back salary, and sold the gun to recompense himself. He had used the gun for demonstration purposes.

In the First Precinct, the center of gambling activities, Capt. Frank S. W. Burke is just waiting for permission to stage a cleanup campaign. This could be started immediately if warrantless raids were countenanced, he said. Warrantless raids are contrary to instructions issued by the United States Attorney's office in the past few

Capt. Burke believes that the gambling places and speakeasies are responsible for the recent murders in Washington. He does not think there is any gang proble min the Capital

Don't forget, to be eligible for this grand prize, you must write at least one ad about each of the 35 participating concerns which appear on another page in this paper. But why limit yourself to 35 chances to win? Each type of ad, whether it be a slogan, poem, letter or testimonial, appeals differently to the individuals who are judging. One may like one form of an ad, another some other form. Therefore, "make hay while the sun shines;" spend these last two days writing all different forms of ads, regardless of how many you have already submitted. Each ad you write gives you another chance to win. Why limit yourself? Why not write many ads and give yourself 50 or 100 or more chances to be the big $1,000 winner or to win one of those useful, worth-while special prizes some of the participating merchants are giving, instead of writing an ad about each concern and giving yourself only 35 chances to be the grand award winner?

LOANS LOOMING AS U. S. DEFICIT PASSES BILLION

Long-Term Bond Issue to Raise Funds Expected Next Month.

OFFICIALS EXPRESS BUSINESS OPTIMISM

Excise Duty, Such as Tax on Gasoline, Might Be Imposed.

(Associated Press.)

The Treasury deficit yesterday passed the $1,000,000,000 mark with indications that it would be reduced but little, if any, by the end of the fiscal year on June 30.

At the same time, high administration officials expressed the opinion that the late summer might prove the turning point away from the depression. It was pointed out that previous depressions had turned the corner when agricultural crops were harvested.

Indications grew, meanwhile, that the Treasury would announce a long term bond issue next month to raise money to meet the deficit. However, officials remained silent on any financing plans.

The Treasury statement for May 26, made public yesterday, showed a $1,000,792,431 deficit resulting from collections of $2,792,571,808 and expenditures of $3,793,364,329 thus far in the fiscal year.

Increase Is Expected.

While the Treasury expects to collect $300,000,000 or more in income taxes and war debt interest on June 15 it also looks for total expenditures for the fiscal year to mount to $4,430,000,000, or approximately $700,000,000 more than already has been spent. If this results the deficit probably will be well above $1,000,000,000.

High officials voiced the opinion that prices and business generally had reached their lowest level and that any change would be for the better. It was added, however, the present level might be maintained for months.

The beginning of improved conditions, it was said, was not always visible at once and the turn might not become apparent before November, if the history of previous depressions were repeated.

Secretary Mellon and Undersecretary Mills already have advocated a revision of the tax system to provide a more regular flow of revenue than is received from income taxes, which were said to fluctuate widely with business conditions.

Gas Tax Might Be Imposed.

While neither offered any specific suggestions as to what taxes might be levied, it was pointed out later that an excise duty such as a gasoline tax might be imposed to raise the required revenue.

Opposition to any tax increase has been expressed by Senator Harrison, Mississippi, ranking Democrat on the finance committee. He advocated cutting down Government expenditures to fit the Government income slowing the debt retirement program.

If a long-term bond issue is decided upon it would be used to meet the deficit and retire part of the

DUCE ASSUMES PEACEMAKER'S ROLE IN RIOTS

Mussolini Passes Word Along That Fascists Must Be Curbed.

VATICAN TO PROTEST AGAINST INDIGNITIES

Special Patrols Are Posted to Guard Property of Catholic Church.

Rome, May 28 (A.P.).—Premier Mussolini intervened today to prevent further violence in the heated controversy between Fascist zealots and Catholic organizations, it was understood on excellent authority.

From sources close to the government it was learned the Duce had come to the conclusion that the violence of the young Fascists against members of the Catholic action organization and property of Catholic groups had gone too far. This was especially true of the disorders of last night, when a portrait of Pope Pius XI was trampled on the pavement and Catholic papers and books were burned in a Fascist attack on a Catholic publishing house. The premier was understood to have passed the word down that the students responsible for such disorders must be curbed.

No Protest Yet Filed.

In Vatican circles tonight it was said a protest against these disorders was inevitable, but the Italian foreign office asserted no representation had yet been made regarding the riotous scenes of yesterday or the bitter attacks of Rome newspapers against the Vatican.

Catholic circles, emphasizing the serious nature of the Fascist demonstrations against the church, directed attention to the provisions of the Lateran treaty which make the person of the Pope as inviolable as that of the King of Italy. They said they had confirmation of reports that students had shouted, "Down with the Pope!" and "Death to the Pope!" and had defiled a portrait of his holiness.

Secretary Denies Charges

Osservatore Romano, organ of the Vatican, tonight published a statement authorized by Mgr. Pizzardo, assistant papal secretary, denying allegations of Rome newspapers that he had spoken of the ability of the Catholic action organization "to take power," and also denying other statements against the government attributed to Mgr. Pizzardo.

Special patrols of plain clothes men were posted tonight in the vicinity of churches and other buildings belonging to Catholic organizations throughout Rome.

It was understood that the special patrols were posted at the order of Premier Mussolini.

Rail Chiefs May Use Pressure in Bus War

Executives Propose to Mobilize Vast Army of Security Holders to Work Through Civic Bodies in Congressional Districts.

Proposals to mobilize the vast army of railroad security holders to exert pressure for legislation regulating motor trucks and busses have been maade by railroad executives, it was revealed yesterday.

The proposals are summarized in a confidential survey made by Milton W. Harrison, of New York, president of the Security Owners Association, a copy of which has been made available to the United Press. Copies are being distributed to bankers and other members of the association. The document is dated April 1, 1931, and contains a digest of answers received to a questionnaire sent out in February. Because "of the confidential nature of this survey," it is explained, the names of the executives are not given.

According to the survey, "the president of one of the country's largest railroads" complains that "railroad managers have been and are prohibited by law and public opinion from invoking in the interest of the properties in their charge the political forces which are available to every other interest in American life."

But the unnamed president adds:

"The prohibtions against political activity which I have referred do not apply to the great, if ever shifting, army of railroad security holders. They could, if they would, assure their managers of an equal political opportunity."

"The president of another large trunk line operating in the South and West," is quoted as saying "The real need is * * * organized, aggressive, active cooperation of every security holder to the end that railroads may by legislation have equality in regulation and equality in opportunity with all other carriers using the highways, water, or air."

As summarized in the survey the executives generally demanded repeal of laws prohibiting railroads from operating water carriers and demanded the right to own and operate motors, airplanes and pipelines as well.

"In short," it is stated, "the railroals should be granted full liberties to engage in any and all kinds of transportation."

In response to the question, "In your opinion, is the situation so serious as to unduly concern investors in railroad securities?" it was stated, "Most of the executives answer this question with an unequivocal 'No.'"

One official, "a Central West executive" who took a hopeful view, commented, "We can well afford to have a maintenance year as against an improvement year in 1931."

The association, which includes public utility as well as railroad securities holders, has recently completed another survey of conditions affecting its members. his was done through its cooperating council, said to be represented in 427 of the 433 congressional districts of the Nation.

Suggestions for improvements range from the use of ardio talks to dissemination of private ownership lit-

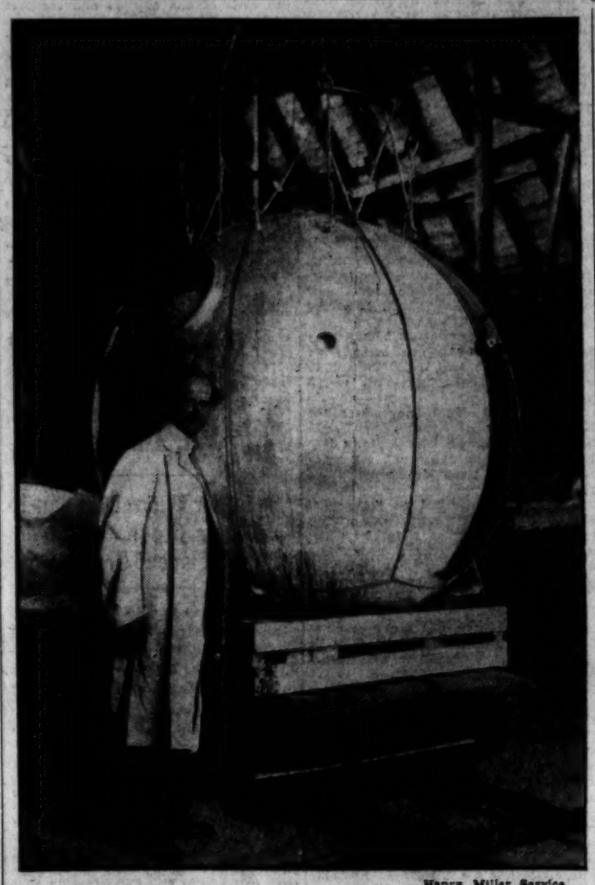
PICCARD TELLS STORY OF PERILOUS NINE-MILE ASCENSION IN BALLOON



Henry Miller Service.

Prof. Auguste Piccard standing beside the novel gondola of his balloon in which he and his physicist, Charles Kipfer, reached heights hitherto unexplored by man.

Measured Conductivity of Gases Generated by Cosmic Rays.

52,500-FOOT HEIGHT IS REACHED BY BAG

Thought Dead, Explorers Say Ship Was Always Under Control.

Berlin, May 28 (A.P.).—Prof. August Piccard, safe with his physicist companion, Claude Kipfer, after ascending in a balloon to a height of 52,500 feet, was said in a Wolff Agency dispatch from Ober Gurgl, Tyrol, near where they landed last night, to have declared his trip into the stratosphere was completely successful.

Prof. Piccard reported he obtained a measurement of the conductivity of gases generated by cosmic rays on the flight, in which it had been feared they lost their lives as the huge bag was seen floating for hours, apparently unable to descend. The balloon was practically undamaged on a Tyrolian mountain glacier, from where it will be brought tomorrow to Ober Gurgl.

The measurement was possible, Prof. Piccard said, only at the highest altitude, for the balloon rose very rapidly after its takeoff at Augsburg yesterday morning.

Ascended 9.936 Miles.

"In 25 minutes," he said, "we had reached an altitude of 9.315 miles, which indicated a much faster speed than we anticipated.

"During the first part of the ascent we were so occupied with the mechanical problem of handling the balloon that only at a height of 9.935 miles were we able to begin taking the principal measurements.

"The altitude of 9.936 miles was the highest we reached. We reached it at 7:45 a. m. We found the outside air pressure at that altitude to be 76 millimeters, about one-tenth normal atmospheric pressure."

While he was speaking, Prof. Piccard referred to a little notebook in which he had painstakingly recorded the data during the flight.

They had been able to use, he said, only a part of the instruments carried in the airtight aluminum gondola, but those used, he said, functioned splendidly. He expressed great satisfaction that the main experiments were successful.

Could Not Open Safety Valve.

While the world was wondering whether the balloon drifting through the skies was pilotless or not, Prof. Piccard was too busy with his scientific calculations to heed the route the balloon was following. Here and there, he said, he took the direction of the drift and estimated that the horizontal speed was averaging about 15 meters per second.

He showed the greatest interest in following the chart of the balloon's route as it was recorded by observers and in comparing this record with that he had made aloft.

It was impossible, he said through the little aperture in the gondola to determine the balloon's position, but he noticed, he said, that the moon appeared much brighter than from the earth's surface.

Asked why he had not landed over Upper Bavaria or in the river valley, Prof. Piccard said that it was impossible to open the safety valve. "If it had not been for this," he said, "we would have come down at 11 a. m."

Encountered 76 Below Zero Weather.

The signal lights fired from the Innsbruck airdrome were not seen, he said. It was impossible to open the manhole in the aluminum gondola before 8:52 p. m., he said, because the pressure inside the gondola had to be brought into conformity with the other atmosphere.

The temperature inside the aluminum ball sometimes rose as high as 106 degress Fahrenheit, he said, while at the same time outside the temperature was as low as 67 to 76 below zero Fahrenheit.

"The fact that we carried a double supply of oxygen saved our lives," he said. "On landing we found there was left only sufficient for one hour more."

Descending from the glacier, he said, was the most difficult task of the whole adventure.

ITALY TO EXECUTE AMERICAN CITIZEN

Man Convicted of Plotting to Kill Mussolini Will Be Shot at Dawn.

Rome, May 28 (A.P.).—Death by shooting in the back is the penalty to which a special tribunal "for defense of the state" this evening condemned Michele Schirru, Italian-born naturalized American citizen, for plotting the assassination of Premier Mussolini by bombing.

Schirru is the first American citizen tried in Italy by such a court. Tomorrow at dawn he will be bound to a chair in the barracks drillyard, and a firing squad will aim a volley at the base of his spine. This is the prescribed punishment for offenses such as those of which he was convicted.

Fifty minutes deliberation enabled the seven military judges to find Schirru guilty of seven counts, including the plot against the premier, possession of two powerful bombs, the shooting of three police officers, carrying weapons and being an anarchist.

Schirru, 32 years old, was naturalized an American citizen in 1926 in New York City. His father, who lives near Sassari, Sardinia, is said to have taken him to New York soon after the World War and set him up in the wholesale banana business in 1922. Schirru's small daughter, Carmela, is still in America. He was arrested here February 3 after having been sought for anarchistic activities in New York and Paris.

When the president of the court, Gen. Cristini, announced sentence this evening, Schirru took it silently and without visible emotion other than paling slightly and slumping in his chair. The crowd in the courtroom roared with applause and burst into the "Giovinezza," the Fascist anthem, until Fascist officers roughly ordered them to stop.

Schirru, guarded by a special force of police which was thrown around the courtroom and the cell just be-

SUBTERFUGES BARED AT TRIAL OF BANKER

Harry Haynes, in Examination, Admits Irregularities, but Defends Acts.

Admission that he had employed irregularities and subterfuges to cover some of his stock exchange transactions while he was president of the Farmers and Mechanics Bank was made by Harry V. Haynes in the course of his trial before Justice Peyton Gordon in the District Supreme Court yesterday.

Mr. Haynes' admisaions were made in the course of cross-examination by United States District Attorney Leo A. Rover, but he insisted on coupling with his admissions additional statements which he said justified him in doing what he did at the time.

Several of the transactions revolved about stock exchange deals carried on for Mrs. Louise T. Chambers, but others were carried on directly by the banker. Asked how much his own stock dealings amounted to, Mr. Haynes said he couldn't say.

"Would you be surprised if I told you they amounted to more than $1,500,000?" asked Mr. Rover.

"I wouldn't be surprised if they amounted to $5,000,000," Mr. Haynes answered.

Mr. Haynes was far from a terse witness and once Mr. Rover interrupted him to say "all right, all right, Mr. Haynes, you needn't make a speech here now."

Some of the entries in the bank records, which the Government contends proves improper conduct by Mr. Haynes in management of the bank, were explained by the banker as probably errors in bookkeeping, which explanation, whenever advanced, met with a sarcastic snort from Mr. Rover.

Mr. Rover sought to have Mr. Haynes admit that at the close of the year 1927, certain entries were made showing cash items which did not exist, at his suggestion.

"No sirree Bob!" Mr. Haynes denied. He went into a lengthy explanation

Fireman Held for Inquest As Girl Dies of Auto Hurts

Helen Nicholson, 10 Years Old, Fatally Injured When Struck by Thomas L. Phillips' Car While Chasing Ball Across Street.

Ten-year-old Helen Nicholson chased a ball into the street and to her death yesterday. Thirty minutes after she was struck by an auto on New Hampshire avenue near Princeton place northwest she died in Garfield Hospital.

According to police, the car which struck her was driven by Thomas L. Phillips, a fireman attached to No. 7 Engine Company. He was held pending the outcome of an inquest today at the morgue.

The child had left school and was returning to her home at 1112 Spring road northwest when she encountered several chums playing ball on the sidewalk. She joined in the sport and presently the ball was thrown to her.

Helen missed and the sphere bounced into the street. She chased it into the path of Phillips' sedan, which was going south on New Hampshire avenue. The driver swerved sharply to the right to avoid her, but the girl's head was struck a direct blow by the door handle.

She was taken to the hospital in Phillips' machine but a compound skull fracture caused death a few minutes after her arrival. Helen was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Nicholson.

Phillips lives on Fifth street near Ingraham northwest.

the earth's stratosphere, in which they claim to have broken the world's altitude record by several thousand feet, Prof. Auguste Piccard and his physicist companion, Charles Kipfer, said the flight was "magnificent beyond conception." In all the nearly 24 hours the scientists were in the air, and especially last night when most of the world had given them up for dead, the balloon was never out of control, he said.

They landed about 10 o'clock last night, but the two explorers had no knowledge of where they were and spent the night in the aluminum ball cage attached to the balloon.

When morning came they stepped out upon the glacier and started down the mountain, only to meet a rescue party coming up.

The explorers, suffering chiefly from thirst, also were glad to fall hungrily upon the provisions which the rescuers brought. Both Prof. Piccard and Kipfer said, however, they were "feeling fine."

Prof. Piccard said they were sixteen hours in the stratosphere, which is generally estimated to begin about 7 miles above the earth's surface.

fore sentence was pronounced, walked handcuffed, but without faltering, from the hall.

Another tumultuous scene occurred at the end of the prosecutor's summation when he asked for the death sentence. The president then threatened to clear the court.

The trial was a whirlwind affair. It opened at 9:20 o'clock this morning. An indictment of 2,500 words was read, 28 witnesses were called and 23 were cross-examined, in addition to an hour's testimony by the defendant. The prosecutor and attorney for the defense each made closing speeches lasting one hour and the judges were out 50 minutes.

Until the trial was nearly over Schirru maintained an attitude of bravado. He grinned so broadly at the testimony of a woman boarding house keeper that the president told him, "Be serious or I shall have to put you out of court."

A number of witnesses, mostly hotel men, testified Schirru had led a gay life in several tourist centers where he was accompanied by women. They said he traveled in the best style and dressed at night in dinner clothes.

The prosecution sought to prove that this luxurious life was made possible by money received from an anarchist gang alleged to be directing the plot against Premier Mussolini.

Other witnesses testified that Schirru attempted to reach the duce's office by a ruse, pretending that he wished to visit a museum.

(Associated Press.)

Upon instructions of the State Department, a representative of the American consulate at Rome was present at the trial of Michelle Schirru, a naturalized American citizen, convicted of plotting the assassination of Premier Mussolini and sentenced to death.

The case is generally looked upon as one involving a plot by a naturalized American against a friendly power, in which the United States would be justified only in intervening in case the trial of the accused man was manifestly unfair.

erature through public schools, libraries and clubs, and encouragement of a wider spread in the ownership of securities. The latter idea is recommended in a suggestion from the District of Columbia, because "every corporate stock owner, howsoever small, becomes a capitalist."

From the same source there is the complaint that "as the local newspapers are very unfair to the traction companies, I doubt if they would fairly represent public sentiment. Suggest your work through local board of trade and chamber of commerce."

Suggestions that material be supplied local newspapers for news and editorial use are numerous and from Pitman, N. J., there is recorded the promise:

"There are two weekly papers published here and I would be glad to get them to use any prepared material."

A correspondent in Birmingham, Ala., is credited with the suggestion that:

"By reason of the fact that the 'average' man owns an automobile and is paying gasoline, license and other taxes, it should be easy to get his help in an effort to make the bus and truck lines pay enough to put them out of business."

A Wabash, Ind., correspondent recommended "some sort of campaign planned to reach the more intelligent citizens, perhaps through chambers of commerce, Rotary, Kiwanis and women's clubs."

From Carona, Calif., there was the suggestion for "placing your brochure entitled 'A Nation-Wide Danger Exists' in hands of our daily newspapers, high school library, public library, on counters of our banks."

The suggestion that life insurance companies be asked to send out literature with their bills for premiums came from New York City, while from Seattle, Wash., there was an assertion of need for "basic information of 'kindergarten economics' to be written and distributed by independent groups and organizations."

Money to Be Borrowed.

Secretary Mellon has said the deficit this year would be met by increasing the public debt through borrowing and that the same course could be followed next year.

The $80,000,000 issue of 91-day Treasury bills to be dated June 1 was reported yesterday by Secretary Mellon to have been heavily oversubscribed.

The total amount applied for was $322,313,000, with 99.777 the lowest bid accepted, equivalent to an interest rate of about seven-eighths of 1 per cent on an annual basis.

The total amount of bids accepted was $80,013,000, with the average price on a bank discount basis about .85 per cent.

Taxi Driver Is Robbed.

Henry C. Prue, colored taxi driver, 2415 Pomeroy street northwest, was held up early yesterday by a colored passenger who took from him his receipts for the day, totaling $9.55. The hold-up occurred at Fifty-third street and Central avenue northeast.

SCIENTISTS AWAIT RESULT OF FLIGHT

Findings Regarding Cosmic Ray Held Important in Everyday Life.

Three American scientists last night voiced hope that the balloon flight of two Swiss physicists to an estimated altitude of about 10 miles would yield man knowledge of a mystery-shrouded force, the cosmic ray, that may mean much in every-day life.

Dr. C. G. Abbot, secretary of the Smithsonian Institution, hailed the safe return to earth of Prof. August Piccard and Charles Kipfer as "another demonstration of the fertility and productivity of the human mind."

"They may have measured the cosmic rays up there with instruments more accurate than any working automatically in free balloons," Abbot said. "Any addition to our knowledge of these rays is valuable for we know very little about them.

"What may be the practical value of them we can not say, but when Roentgen discovered the X-ray, who dreamed of today's radio?"

Fleming Adds Praise.

With quick praise John A. Fleming, acting director of the Carnegie Institution of Washington's department of terrestrial magnetism, received news of the flight's end.

"Fine!" he exclaimed. "They may have measured the conductivity of the atmosphere and other factors of electrostatic electricity — all worth while."

To Dr. W. J. Humphreys, Weather Bureau physicist, the flight suggested that human beings could live in sealed rocket planes at altitudes far greater than airships have reached.

Dr. Abbot described as "extreme" the penetrating quality of cosmic rays. Some describe them as "like a bullet," others "like a wave," he explained, and they are literally everywhere that man has explored.

Values of Rays Unknown.

"It is as though the universe were being continually bombarded with them from every possible direction," Abbot continued. "They shoot through the atmosphere and penetrate into the water. Perhaps continually passing through you and me, they may be of great importance—or of none at all—to our health. Not until we know more about them can we say whether they may be of use to man.

"For about 15 years scientists have been working on them. We believe they can not be generated by the sun, because they com from everywhere. It was a Dr. Hess, of Austria, who suggested they were generated from outer space—beyond the hundreds of miles of atmosphere around the earth."

Guns of Fort Story 'Sink' Enemy Fleet

Attacking Force Destroyed in Drive on Capital in Mimic War.

Norfolk, Va., May 28 (A.P.).—The "black" fleet, attempting to force its way past Cape Henry this afternoon in an effort to lay waste the Chesapeake Bay area and steam on to Washington, was "destroyed" by the guns of Fort Story.

Theoretically, Army observers state, the entire fleet, consisting of three cruisers and a dozen destroyers, in command of Rear Admiral O. G. Murfin, was wiped out by the concentrated gun fire of the fort.

In reality, the guns of the fort were fired "on paper" and the attacking column went through the battle without a scratch. Following the first defeat, the enemy force drew off to sea again for another attack, scheduled to be waged sometime tonight.

Federal Building Sites Inspected in Danville

Special to The Washington Post.

Danville, Va., May 28.—H. S. McAllister and R. H. Dauch, of Washington, Federal representatives of the Treasury and Postoffice Departments, were here today to begin examining the twenty sites offered by Danville property owners for the proposed $500,000 Federal building.

They expect to be here five days and will go over the offered sites with their proprietors. Their recommendation will not be disclosed until the site chosen is announced by the Treasury Department, probably not within 60 days.

Spanish Peseta Drops.

New York, May 28 (A.P.).—Spanish pesetas broke to a new low record today, when cable remittances sold for 9.15 cents, although they recovered subsequently to 9.30 cents, which represents a loss of 15-100 of a cent from yesterday. This weakness followed news from Madrid that the Bank of Spain had been authorized to increase its circulation from 5,200,000,000 pesetas to 6,000,000,000 pesetas.

Dog Causes Auto Crash Killing Man, Hurting 3

Special to The Washington Post.

Staunton, Va., May 28.—Concern for the safety of a dog cost Ernest Wood, 20, his life, put two girls in hospital and injured another youth. The accident happened late last night near Augusta Springs, where the quartet resided. Wood, driving a light sport roadster he purchased early this week, was rounding a curve when the dog, riding on the running board, was thrown off. Wood turned his head to see what happened to the dog and the automobile left the road and turned over three times. Wood was killed almost instantly.

The version of the accident was given by Blanche Wilson, 17, one of girls in hospital. The other is Thelma Trimble, 15. Neither is badly injured. Eeach has a broken left collar bone, abrasions and bruises. Elmer Coffey, 19, is at home with a broken arm, cuts and bruises.

Wood's funeral will be held Friday morning at the Augusta Springs Presbyterian Church. He is survived by his parents, four brothers and three sisters.

BANK IRREGULARITIES BARED IN EXAMINATION OF HAYNES

of what might have happened, but said he couldn't explain everything. In the course of his explanation he said that he gave his personal check for one item.

"Was it good?" snapped Mr. Rover.

Mr. Haynes was gazing into his memory over the heads of the jurors during his recital and when that question was fired at him he paused, smiled slightly and said:

"It was paid, anyhow."

Mr. Rover attacked large credits advanced to Mrs. Chambers. Mr. Haynes admitted he knew of the banking regulation prohibiting the granting of credit to any one person to an amount of more than 10 per cent of the capital and reserves of the bank.

He admitted, too, that he had approved a loan to Fred Chambers, Mrs. Chambers' son, of several thousands of dollars at a time when the loans to Mrs. Chambers exceeded the limit. He made Mrs. Chambers sign her son's note because at the time he thought the son was not of legal age, although later he discovered Fred Chambers was of legal age when the loan was made.

"This loan to Fred Chambers was a subterfuge to evade the law, wasn't it?"

"It was a subterfuge to please her."

"You knew it was violation of law."

"I didn't know it was a violation of law."

"You knew it was wrong, didn't you?"

"Wait a minute now; what do you mean, 'wrong?'"

Loans on the "Chambers' line" reached a total of $148,000 at one time, Mr. Rover said, although the 10 per cent limit of loans was only $82,300 for the bank.

Mr. Haynes, however, stuck by his defense that he had done what he had done in an effort to recoup some of the losses suffered by Mrs. Chambers on the stock exchange. He defended the loans to Fred Chambers, declaring that the collateral deposited as security was worth far more than the amount of the loans.

Some of the transactions were handled irregularly, he admitted, but declared that he acted in what he believed the best interests of the bank and Mrs. Chambers. All banks, he said, had allowed overdrafts and excess loans in "cases of necessity" to protect the bank's interests.

"If I violated the law," Mr. Haynes said, "I wasn't conscious of the fact." He leaned forward in the witness chair and banged the rail of the witness stand to emphasize his statement.

"You were conscious that you were violating a regulation of the comptroller, weren't you"

"Yes, I knew of the regulation; but —was that a law? Yes, probably it was."

"You were a banker. You ought to know."

The trial will be resumed at 9:30 o'clock this morning, with Mr. Haynes still on the witness stand under cross-examination. It probably will run into next week.

HALF-HOLIDAY URGED IN SPITE OF DEFICIT

Appeal for Budget Bureau to Reverse Order Made by Employes' Group.

An appeal to the Budget Bureau to reverse its order prohibiting incurring of deficits to place the Saturday half-holiday law for Government employes in effect was made public yesterday by Miss Gertrude McNally, secretary-treasurer of the National Federation of Federal Employes.

The appeal was contained in a letter addressed to Col. J. Clawson Roop, Director of the Budget Bureau, which concluded with the statement:

"We believe that you recognize the fairness of applying the Saturday half-holiday statute equally to all employes covered by it, and we urge that you advise the departments and independent establishments that where the necessity for additional personnel or additional appropriation can be successfully demonstrated, a deficiency for this purpose will be entertained by your office."

Failure of various departments to put the half-holiday law into effect in various instances has been explained by lack of sufficient personnel and money, Miss McNally wrote, continuing:

Application Is Mandatory.

"That the application of the Saturday half-holiday to all employes, except those specifically excluded is mandatory is clear not only from the text of the law, but from the Comptroller General's decision, A-36130, dated April 16, 1931, in which, referring to watchmen at the Capitol power plant, he decided that the employes were entitled to the benefit of the act and that 'this right may not be denied because of the requirement that these employes be available for duty all the time, or because it may be necessary to hire additional employes in order that Government property may be adequately protected.'

"We note your statement under date of March 11, 1931, to the Secretary of War, advising that it is not contemplated to entertain any supplemental or deficiency estimates for putting into effect the Saturday half-holiday act.

Statement Is Denied.

"In this letter to the Secretary of War you further state that proponents of the bill indicated that adoption of the measure would entail no additional expense to the Government.

"No representative of this organization made a statement to that effect. We did state that in our judgment the $13,000,000 given as an estimate of the cost of the act was excessive; that in the majority of instances the act could be put into effect without additional appropriation, but that for measurable work, and work requiring service to the public 24 hours a day, there would have to be some additional appropriation. Reference to statements given out by this office during the pendency of the Saturday half-holiday measure in Congress will bear out this statement."

at the presenttime, but believes there will be unless such places are obliterated.

All of the warrantless raids made on the basis of information gathered by four headquarters detectives who were "looking for a couple of fellows" were held to be valid by United States Attorney Leo A. Rover yesterday.

Mr. Rover notified his assistant at Police Court, David A. Hart, to proceed with the prosecution of persons found in the place on Ninth street near I street northwest, which was an alleged "speakeasy."

The District Attorney took another move against the premises when he instituted, through Harold W. Orcutt, padlock proceedings, against the place and temporary injunctions against Sam Brown and Samuel Green, named as tenants of the property. The "nuisance" cause of the Volstead act was invoked in the hearing.

At another point police lost their advantage when Frank Adams, assistant United States attorney at Police Court, refused to issue "papers" against Richard Lauxman, 50 years old, who was found in a place on Thirteenth street near E street northwest, when police visited there Wednesday evening on a tip that some one had been shot. The prosecutor ruled that there had been shown to him no evidence to support a charge against Lauxman.

In the padlock injunction affidavits by Sergt. George M. Little, Detective Sergeant Larry O'Dea and Edward C. Ford, an aleged employe, were used by the Government. Ford, in his affidavit, said that he had worked at the place four weeks and had served drinks.

IDLENESS NOW LESS, LABOR CHIEF SAYS

Secretary Doak Finds Slight Improvement in Jobs During May.

(Associated Press.)

Reports to the Labor Department were said yesterday by Secretary Doak to have indicated a slight improvement in employment conditions this month.

The Labor Secretary's statement followed one Wednesday night by President Green of the American Federation of Labor warning that employment gains indicated by the number of union men finding jobs had not been up to normal and that steps should be taken to prevent distress next winter.

Mr. Doak did not estimate the number of unemployed, saying he had nothing on which to base such a calculation. Mr. Green urged employers to divide available work pro rata among employes. Mr. Doak said he had no information as to what was being done along this line, adding the President's emergency employment committee had been urging such action upon employers. This committee has reported some success in its efforts.

Idle Survey Planned.

The Secretary said he had no figures to indicate the amount of normal unemployment, but that the department had planned such a survey as soon as economists were available.

He added estimates of normal unemployment ran from 760,000 to 1,600,000. The Secretary said his personal "guess" was around 1,500,000 persons are out of work during normal times.

Vice Chairman Croxton, of the President's emergency employment committee, said industries had been prorating employment among their workers throughout the winter and were continuing to do so.

Work Splitting Practiced.

"The policy of splitting work among employes has been followed by industry throughout the depression and continues," said Croxton, who is in charge of the committee work while Chairman Woods is in Europe.

"The number of workers affected would be only a guess, and it would be useless to try to give any exact figures. Our committees have stressed this piont throughout the country and are continuing to do so with marked success."

Croxton said he had nothing on which to base an estimate of the number of unemployed due to the depression, but expressed the opinion that the normal unemployment would average from 1,500,000 to 1,600,000.

DISTRICT HEADS END SLASHING OF BUDGET

Commissioners Have Pared Department Estimates by $11,000,000.

The District Commissioners have completed their reductions of the 1933 departmental estimates for the present, Dr. Luther H. Reichelderfer, chairman, said yesterday. Further study, and perhaps some alterations, will be made after Maj. Daniel J. Donovan, District auditor, presents a complete report on revenues for the fiscal year ending June 30.

While the Commissioners are not permitted to disclose just what items have been eliminated from the estimates, prior to presentation of the budget to Congress, Dr. Reichelderfer said the approximately $11,000,000 slash necessary to prevent an increase in the tax rate had been achieved.

The cuts are understood to have been fairly well distributed throughout the departments, with the parks taking probably the heaviest reduction. Although the school estimates were cut considerably, they did not fare so badly as had been feared.

Few reductions were made in the police and fire requests, as those departments asked for little beyond absolute necessities. While the Health Department's estimates were severely slashed, the Commissioners dealt as leniently with them as possible.

One of the most perplexing problems arose in the Public Welfare Department proposals. While the Commissioners sought to eliminate so far as possible all requests for new personnel, they were confronted in this instance with please for additional employes that are necessary if all members of the department are to get the Saturday half-holiday already in force in other departments save the fire and police.

The Commissioners have until September to make further adjustments before transmitting the estimates to the Bureau of the Budget.

Two Men Hurt in Auto Crash Near Poolesville

Two men were injured slightly yesterday when the automobiles in which they were riding came together in headlong collision on the Frederick pike near Poolesville. According to Montgomery County Police, a car driven by I. A. Perry, of Philadelphia, was attempting to pass another car on a curve when it collided with the car of J. L. Gies, of Reisterstown, Md., who was headed in the opposite direction.

Harry L. Stolpp, of Reisterstown, a passenger in the Gies car, and Victor L. Goodman, 4102 Fourteenth street northwest, a passenger in the Perry car, were treated by Dr. E. W. White, of Poolesville, for cuts on the face. No arrests were made.

Soldier Is Injured In Auto Accident

First Lieut. C. V. Barnum, 38, Is Hurt in Crash Near Baltimore.

First Lieut. Charles Vernon Barnum, 38 years old, detached from the cavalry for present recruiting duty at Fort Howard, Md., lay in a critical condition last night at Walter Reed Hospital after receiving a fracture of the skull and a possible concussion of the brain in an automobile crash.

He was hurt after the automobile in which he was riding with an Army sergeant on the Pleasure Island road near the Army encampment, a short distance from Baltimore, overturned when his companion lost control of the wheel on entering a smoke-covered stretch of road.

He was speeded to the hospital here after receiving first aid at the fort. His companion, Sergt. Paul Shepherd, also on recruiting duty at the post, suffered shock and lacerations of the face and body. He was admitted to the post hospital. The accident occurred while both were proceeding to Millers Island and Sandy Beach, summer resorts, close to the spot where a march fire was raging. Barnum is a native of Rutland, Va., and rose to his present commission from the ranks of a private.

REPORT ASKS HOUSE TO IMPEACH HORTON

Friends of Tennessee's Governor Claim That They Can Halt Move.

Nashville, Tenn., May 28 (A.P.).—A committee of the Tennessee House of Representatives formally reported today that impeachment of Gov. Henry Hollis Horton was "warranted" and announced that articles of impeachment would be presented as soon as they can be prepared.

Administration leaders accused the governor's opponents of delaying presentation of the articles today to allow time to electioneer for the 50 votes necessary to prefer the indictment. There are 99 representatives.

"We've got them licked," Horton supporters said as the struggle for votes continued in hotel lobbies and rooms tonight.

Followers of Representative Edward H. Crump, of Memphis, leader of the fight for impeachment, said they were confident of voting the indictment tomorrow or early next week.

The nature of the charges against the governor was not disclosed.

Investigation into the administration of Gov. Horton began shortly after the Sixty-seventh General Assembly convened last January.

The primary reason for the investigation was the collapse of banks with nearly $7,000,000 of State funds on deposit. These banks, the investigating committee charged, were institutions in which Col. Luke Lea, administration political leader, and Rogers Caldwell, Nashville financier, were interested.

In a report presented to the Legislature last Monday, signed by seven investigating committeemen and the speaker of the House of Representatives and president of the Senate as ex officio members, Gov. Horton was accused of having been under the domination of Lea and Caldwell. A minority report, signed by five committeemen, charged that the majority group prevented them from getting "all of the facts into the record."

MARINES HONOR TWO RETIRING COMRADES

Sergeants Are Given Review With Gen. Butler at Quantico.

Every Marine quartered at the Quantico (Va.) Barracks, from Maj. Gen. Smedley D. Butler, the commandant, down to the lowliest buck private, turned out yesterday to pay military honors to two of their buddies on the occasion of their retirement.

Quartermaster Sergt. John J. Stahl was leaving the service after nearly 31 years of duty, which took him to the Philippines, Cuba, Porto Rico, the West Indies and to France. Serg. Maj. John E. Allen, who joined the Marines July 6, 1898, also was doffing the blue uniform.

Gen. Butler had returned Wednesday night from Oregon, where he was called to aid in organization of the State constabulary. He stood with Sergt. Stahl and Sergt. Maj. Allen as the troops passed in review.

Sergt. Maj. Allen is planning to become a forest ranger in the Smoky Mountain National Park in Tennessee and North Carolina. Immediately following his enlistment in Knoxville, Tenn., he fought in the Spanish American War. Later he saw action in the Philippine insurrection, Haiti, Santo Domingo, Nicaragua and the World War.

Sergt. Stahl enlisted in Allentown, Pa., where he was born. He expects to join his wife in their Baltimore home. He is the holder of several expeditionary medals and was wounded at Belleau Wood.

U. S.-State Coordination Is Asked by Tax Experts

(Associated Press.)

A group of tax collectors suggested to President Hoover yesterday that a conference be called to coordinate Federal and State taxation.

Mark Graves, tax commissioner for New York, said after the conference there was a complete lack of coordination between Federal and State taxation. Others with Graves were H. S. Hicks, of Illinois, and Henry Long, of Massachusetts.

MONTGOMERY PLANS HONOR TO WAR DEAD

Churches and Legion Posts Will Hold Memorial Day Services.

Montgomery County Bureau of The Post, 9103 Conn. Ave., North Chevy Chase, Md. Telephone Wisconsin 4205.

Assessments for the two gas companies which operate in Montgomery County were made yesterday by the county commissioners, meeting in Rockville. The assessments were fixed after hearing arguments by Robert B. Peter, jr., attorney for the gas companies, and a conference with representatives of the State tax commission.

The 20-inch mains of the Maryland Gas Transmission Co. were assessed at $20,000 per mile, while the 12-inch pipes of the Georgetown Gas Light Co., of Montgomery County, were assessed at $8,000 per mile.

The county commissioners and members of the town council of Rockville conferred on proposed improvements for streets around the new courthouse in Rockville. Plans for the development, which will eliminate the bottle-neck where Montgomery avenue connects with the Frederick pike have been prepared by Irving C. Root, chief engineer of the Maryland National Capital Park and Planning Commission, and Harry Shaw, county engineer.

It was decided not to take definite action in approving the plans until Mayor J. Roger Spates and the town council have had an opportunity to discuss them. The county commissioners also will make further studies of the plans.

Funds for the improvement are on hand, according to Commissioner Lacy Shaw, president of the board, and the commissioners are anxious to get the project under way as soon as possible so that it can be completed this season.

Montgomery County will observe Memorial Day tomorrow with services by the three American Legion posts and with church services in most of the county's cemeteries. Banks and many business houses will be closed, as will most county offices.

Graves of members of the three county legion posts will be decorated by their comrades, and many county residents will visit nearby cemeteries to decorate graves of friends and relatives.

The Cissel-Saxon Post, American Legion, of Silver Spring, will hold services at the memorial stone in front of the National Guard Armory, which was unveiled last Memorial Day. The flag will be hoisted in the morning at the stone and in the afternoon a wreath will be placed with appropriate exercises, according to Maj. Howard W. Cutler, post commander.

Henderson-Smith-Edmonds Post, at Rockville, will decorate the graves of comrades in cemeteries at Rockville, Gaithersburg, Darnestown, Laytonsville, Beallsville and Beltsville. The Norman Price Post, at Sandy Spring, will decorate graves at the Olney and Mount Carmel Cemeteries.

Cissel, commanding officer of the Service Company, Maryland National Guard, Silver Spring, and counsel to the county commissioners, will represent Montgomery County at the unveiling of the tablet in memory of the county men who gave their lives in the World War which will be held in Baltimore tomorrow.

The Blair Citizens Association will meet Tuesday night at 8 o'clock in the Takoma-Silver Spring High School, when William E. Martin, new president, will announce committees.

Plans for the annual garden and lawn contest will be discussed. L. C. Shumac, who won the prize two years ago, is chairman of the committee in charge. No contest was held last year.

Dr. F. Berry Plummer, pastor of the United Brethren Church, Hagerstown, Md.

Acting on behalf of Kiwanis International, in which he serves as governor of the Capital district comprising 45 clubs in the District, Maryland, Virginia and Delaware, Dr. Plummer later led a pilgrimage of members to the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier, where he laid a wreath in following a custom set by the organization in 1925.

In addition to Dr. Plummer, the program of the exercises included a eulogy to deceased members by Dr. John C. Palmer, pastor of the Washington Heights Presbyterian Church, and the reading of the list of members of the Washington club who have died since 1917. Robert A. Hutchison, of Manassas, Va., lieutenant-governor of the clubs' district, was an honor guest.

ENGINEERS REVEAL IMPROVED DESIGNS

Moderately Priced Homes Will Be Future Need, Realtors Are Told.

Special to The Washington Post.

Baltimore, May 28.—Construction engineers have not spent their time crying during the depression, but have developed improved methods of design and building in a period of inactivity, Schiller W. Framheim, of Chicago, said here today.

Mr. Framheim made the assertion in an address before the cooperative apartment division of the National Association of Real Estate Boards at its convention in the Lord Baltimore Hotel.

Synthetic materials, greatly improved during the last two years, will reduce the cost of American buildings in the future, Mr. Framheim said, adding that these materials, of which a substitute for mahogany is one, will be more lasting than the materials they will replace and will reduce upkeep to a degree "astounding to the ordinary layman."

Space Saving Seen.

Discussing the future of the cooperative apartment, Mr. Framheim said that moderately priced buildings must show an even greater conservation of space than has been shown in the past. Such buildings, he asserted, must have plenty of light and ventilation, but the smallest possible percentage of unusable space, if they are to be sold to people of moderate means.

Mr. Framheim was one of the speakers who addressed group meetings into which the 1,400 delegates attending the convention divided their attention today.

The day is not far distant when the American in search of a home will be able to purchase one that can be constructed in a week and which may cost, with all modern equipments, about $4,000, A. Lawrence Kocher, managing editor of the Architectural Record and former professor of architecture at Pennsylvania State College and University of Virginia, told members of the home builders and subdividers' division.

This house of Mr. Kocher's vision will be planned and built with a new regard to the preservation of health. It will have adjustable outside walls and partitions so that occupants can arrange the interior as necessity of whim dictates. Central community heating will relive house dwellers of all responsibility in this connection. There will be more sun porches, roof terraces and attractive outdoor gardens and the houses will be built so that more sunlight and air may be admitted to keep the occupants out of the hospital, the speaker said.

Farmers' Needs Discussed.

The American farmer came in for his part in the discussion when Lewis C. Gray, of the Department of Agriculture, read a paper before the farms lands and country estates division.

Mr. Gray warned the realtors engaged in selling and managing farms that they must reckon with the influence of the declining birth rate, which threatens this country and which may cut down on farm lands prospects.

Problems of taxation confronting property owners could best be solved through the establishment of a single Federal tax system, whose effectiveness would be distributed over the entire population, Dr. Simon E. Leland, professor of economics at the University of Chicago, told the owners division.

Asserting that real property already was bearing more than its just share of the national tax burdens, Dr. Leland, who is engaged in tax research work for the national realtors organization, said that except for the Federal tax suggestion the alternative method for relief would be to alter tax laws so that credit would be given for State income tax payments as is now done in inheritance tax levies.

Lawrence T. Stevenson, of Pittsburgh, for the last four years a director of the national association, was nominated for the presidency tonight. It is expected that he will be elected unanimously tomorrow morning.

Others nominated were Mark Levy, Chicago, treasurer, and William H. Gardiner, Winnipeg; James B. Fisher, Brooklyn, N. Y.; August C. Sehrt, Milwaukee; John J. Wagner, Cedar Rapids, Iowa, and Charles E. Rousek, East Orange, N. J., as vice presidents.

Still Weak From Bath, Zigzag Driver Freed

Chicago, May 28 (A.P.).—Everything was explained to the satisfaction of everybody concerned when John Tancyk was brought before Judge John J. Rooney.

"He was driving his automobile zigzag all over the street," complained Policeman Francis E. Murray.

"I wasn't," the accused man said. "I had just had a Turkish bath and it made me so weak I couldn't drive straight."

"But," persisted the officer, "I smelled alcohol.

"That," said Tancyk, "was an alcohol rub I had at the bath."

"And that," decided Judge Rooney, "is as good as I've heard. You're discharged."

POST INVITES PUBLIC TO WOODLAND BEACH

Week-End Holiday Is Chance for Visit to Popular Summer Haven.

Everybody has made plans for celebrating the Memorial Day holiday week-end. Thousands of Capital residents are looking forward to a couple of days away from the office, away from their homes and away from all the bothersome details of daily life in the city.

Many of these have made definite decisions as to where they will spend tomorrow and Sunday. But to the hundreds of others who are still debating what to do and where to go, The Washington Post extends a cordial invitation to visit Woodland Beach either day.

Woodland Beach will be open to the public tomorrow and Sunday from 9 o'clock in the morning until dark or later that all may view its advantages. A visit to Woodland Beach may prove the most profitable holiday trip you have ever taken, for you may find there the spot for which you have long been searching.

Idea Hits Popular Chord.

The Post's Woodland Beach summer colony development has struck a popular chord. From the first day the sale of lots on this beautiful South River property was opened, the idea has clicked with the public and the number of lot owners has increased rapidly from day to day.

There are many things about Woodland Beach which have proven attractive. It offers bathing, boating and fishing, three sports which find favor with many.

It is far enough from Washington to have the rural atmosphere so necessary to make a summer colony a success and yet it is near enough to the Capital to make overnight stays at the beach no inconvenience.

Price Low, Payments Easy.

Chief among the many attractive features of Woodland Beach is the price of a lot. One may be secured for $93, an amount within the reach of almost every one.

Better still, the entire amount need not be paid in cash. A down payment of $9 will entitle the purchaser to select his or her lot, and the remainder may be paid in monthly installments of $3.50. The only other requirement is a subscription to The Washington Post.

Take at least a portion of your spare time during this holiday period and run out to the beach. Take the Defense highway toward Annapolis, turning right at Camp Parole to Maryland State highway No. 2, across the South River Bridge, and then left on Mayo road, following that highway to the beach. Those who do not wish to drive may take the W. B. & A. traction cars to Camp Parole, where every car tomorrow and Supday will be met by buses to transport visitors to and from the beach.

Interstate Bus Hearing Is Planned by P. U. C.

A conference was held yesterday between the District Commissioners and the Public Utilities Commission to discuss plans for the interstate bus hearing to be held Monday by the utilities body. William A. Van Duzer, newly appointed director of traffic, and Corporation Counsel William W. Bride were also present.

The commission after July 1 will have primary control of interstate bus operation, but the District Commissioners will have a voice through the joint board that is set up by the new traffic act.

Phone Assets Increase; Dividend Will Be Less

New York, May 28 (A.P.).—The 1930 pamphlet report of the International Telephone & Telegraph Co., operating world-wide telephone, radio and cable system, shows total assets of $604,403,221 compared with $535,203,589 at the end of the previous year.

Net income available for dividends, as previously announced totaled $13,750,132, equal to $2.07 a common share, against $17,732,158 or $3.03 a share in 1929.

Dead Members Honored By Cosmopolitan Club

Members of the Cosmopolitan Club held memorial services yesterday at a luncheon meeting at the Carlton Hotel and later placed wreaths on the tombs of the four members who have died since the club was formed in 1922. They were John C. Merkling, Milton Hopfenmaier, Orville B. Drown and Samuel Zirkin.

The Rev. Calvert E. Buck, chaplain of the club, in a brief address declared that man should not grieve for dead friends, but rather should look forward "to joining them in a better world."

Auto Passenger Files Suit.

Alleging that a car in which she was a passenger had defective brakes, with the result that it coasted down an incline after being parked, and crashed, Mrs. Ethel R. Hegarty, of 3028 O street northwest, yesterday filed suit for $10,000 damages against Herbert P. Riley and his wife, Dorothy P. Riley. Mrs. Riley was driving the car, the suit alleges. The mishap occurred April 9.

Tree Spraying Begins Monday, Official Says

The annual spraying of the 110,000 shade trees in the National Capital will begin Monday, Clifford Lanham, District superintendent of trees and parking, announced yesterday.

Approximately 300,000 gallons of water, containing 25,000 pounds of arsenate of lead, will be sprayed on the trees. While the spray is deadly to insects, it contains no acid and will do automobiles no harm if they happen to get a portion of the mixture, according to Mr. Lanham.

Two Entombed in Mine Believed Still Alive

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., May 28 (A.P.).—Officials at the Delaware colliery of the Hudson Coal Co., this afternoon announced that two men were entombed behind a slide of rock and coal in the mine.

They have been trapped since this morning. Communication was established with the imprisoned workers and at last reports they were still alive.

CALHOUN BLACKMAIL CASE IS SPEEDED UP BY JUSTICE ADKINS

Woman Witness Is Halted in Answering Questions With Too Much Detail.

ONE OF 3 DEFENDANTS OBJECTS TO HER STARE

Testimony Brings Out Plan to Raise $5,000,000 for "Alma Mater."

Justice Jesse Adkins yesterday instituted his "speeding up program" in the trial of three men and a woman on an indictment charging them with conspiring to blackmail Capt. and Mrs. C. C. Calhoun.

His first chance came when Mrs. Anna Hillenbrand, on the witness stand, answered too fully the questions of her attorney, L. Robinson Maddux. He directed Maddux to stop his witness after she had answered the questions because "she will talk indefinitely."

Mr. Maddux objected to the remark and asked for an "exception," which was granted. Later in the hearing an associate of Maddux twice arose to protest against remarks being made behind the counsel table. On her second protest, she said she was speaking of counsel for some of the other defendants. Justice Adkins said that he had not noticed any unethical conduct, and he suggested that the rule of the court was that one lawyer handle a case in court, and that only Maddux was qualified to make requests.

Noble Objects to Stare.

W. Clark Noble, one of the defendants, rose to his feet and said, "That woman has been looking straight at me, and I haven't done a thing." He quickly realized he was "out of order" and sat down.

On the stand Mrs. Hillenbrand said that she had heard defamatory remarks about Mrs. Calhoun while she was visiting a friend at Berkley Springs, W. Va. She denied, though, that she had ever used these remarks as a weapon against the Calhouns, for whom, she said, she at that time had the highest regard.

Mrs. Hillenbrand said that she had three contracts with Mr. Noble, one of them empowering her to negotiate with the Calhouns for the services of the sculptor. She said that she did not have in mind any definite figure as being owed.

$5,000,000 Fund Planned.

The witness testified that she was promoting the Alma Mater, an organization to do philanthropic work, and that she hoped to raise $5,000,000 or more to build a suitable home for the organization. Under cross-questioning by Assistant United States Attorney Irvin Goldstein, she said she had done much charitable work, and that she believed she could use the model made by Mr. Noble for the Woman's Universal Alliance.

At one time, she said, Mrs. Calhoun had told her "she would have to feed the Nobles." In amplification, she declared Mrs. Calhoun had told her Noble "was a spendthrift," and that Mrs. Calhoun often had taken him fruit and other things.

Court will meet at 9:20 today and the session will last until 4:30, which was the program yesterday.

Banks Agree on Home Loan Rate.

New York, May 28 (A.P.).—An agreement to refrain from loaning call money on stock exchange collateral at less than the current renewal rate of 1½ per cent has been reached by a number of leading New York banks. The move was designed to keep the call money rate stable by preventing the shifting of out-of-town bank and corporation money with consequent fluctuations in the call rate, such as occurred recently when a 1 per cent renewal rate was posted by the New York Stock Exchange.

French President Will Marry Soon

Doumergue, Protestant, to Wed Catholic, Paris Reports Say.

Paris, May 28 (A.P.).—Reports are circulting that Gaston Doumergue, known to France as the "Bachelor President," is to be married either before or shortly after his term of office expires on June 13.

The bride, it is said, will be a French woman, whom he has known for years, and reports say that she is a member of the Catholic Church, although the president is of the Protestant faith.

A religious ceremony, it is understood, would take place at a Catholic Church either in Paris or in the provinces and if the wedding takes place before the presidential term expires the mayor of the Paris ward or of the president's home town, Aiguevives, would be called to the Elysee Palace to officiate.

Attempt at False Affidavit Alleged

Senator Glenn, of Counsel for Factor, Is Loser in Court Skirmish.

Chicago, May 28 (A.P.).—United States Senator Otis F. Glenn sought unsuccessfully today to introduce in the record of the John Factor extradition hearing a letter charging an attempt by a purported agent of the British consul to have a false affidavit filed in the case. Senator Glenn heads the counsel opposing Factor's removal to England for trial in an alleged $5,000,000 fake stock swindle.

The senator read a letter from Harry G. Green, inventors' representative, stating that a man who represented himself as Hector Pollansbee presented alleged credentials from the British consulate and asked him to file a false affidavit that he knew Factor and that his transactions were "a huge and unalloyed fraud."

Senator Glenn requested that Green and Pollansbee be subpenaed, but United States Commissioner Edwin K. Walker declined, commenting that the matter was not material.

DISTRICT FLAG TEST WILL CLOSE JUNE 6

If you have any ideas about an appropriate design for a flag for the District of Columbia, now is the time to send them to the Flag Contest Editor of The Washington Post. And —"more quicker, more better," because the contest being sponsored by The Post will close a week from Saturday, June 6.

Judging from the number of designs being submitted daily, Washingtonians are very anxious to have a flag for the District, and as soon as the contest closes all drawings received will be turned over to the following judges: Dr. B. C. MacNeil, department commander of the American Legion; Gen. Anton Stephan, commander of the District National Guard; William L. Thomas, commander of the District department of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, and Lieut. Col. U. S. Grant 3d, director of public buildings and parks.

After the judges have made their selection, the design will be turned over to the members of the Commission of Fine Arts for their advice. It is hoped a bill may be introduced in Congress this coming session approving the flag selected, so that it may be made the official emblem of Washington.

With the many drawings being received daily, it is impossible to give recognition to all those submitting suggestions—that is, to reproduce all designs in The Post, but every pattern sent in will be turned over to the judges for consideration as to appropriateness.

Remember, a $25 prize is offered for the design selected. Make your drawings in pen and ink and describe the color scheme in an accompanying letter.

Hoover Grandchildren Leave for California

(Associated Press.)

A large bag of peppermint candy caused President Hoover yesterday to make an extra trip to his executive office. After once going to the White House, he returned to get the candy, which he had obtained for a gift to his three grandchildren, who are leaving today for California.

President Hoover spent considerable time last night with his grandchildren and Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Hoover, jr. They are scheduled to leave today about the same time the President departs for his Memorial Day speech at Valley Forge, Pa. They will spend the summer at the President's Palo Alto home.

Plan for District Flag Indorsed by Kiwanians

The following resolution was adopted at yesterday's meeting of the Washington Kiwanis Club:

"The Washington Post has proposed that the District of Columbia should have a flag, as do the States of the Union.

"The public affairs committee, W. Seton Kent, chairman, has suggested to the board of directors of the Kiwanis Club of Washington that this project be indorsed. The directors approved it and, therefore, be it

"Resolved, That the Kiwanis Club of Washington, D. C., assembled at a regular meeting on Thursday, May 28, 1931, unanimously indorses the project of The Washington Post Company, to the effect that the District of Columbia should have its own flag, as have all the States of the United States."

UNION FUND CHARGE BEFORE GRAND JURY

Three Witnesses Are Heard in Alleged Shortage of $30,000.

Three witnesses went before the District grand jury yesterday in an attempt to shed some light on the alleged embezzlement of $30,000 from the funds of the International Union of Operating Engineers. Two of the witnesses were men who were targets for a gunman in a lunchroom on K street near the union offices last week.

John Possehl, general secretary of the union, and Arthur M. Huddell, president, both of whom were shot at, and James I. Walsh, of Chicago, Ill., employe of the bank which handles the union funds, were witnesses heard by the grand jury.

Another witness, Frank Langdon, editor of the union's publication, is still in the hospital suffering from wounds he sustained when the gunman fired at him, and was unable to attend. The funds allegedly tampered with were the benefit funds of the union.

No return from the grand jury hearing is expected before Tuesday of next week, which is the regular day for the filing of the findings of that body.

Change of Name Is Petitioned.

The District Supreme Court was petitioned yesterday to let John C. Meserlian, assistant manager of a drug store at Fourteenth and H streets northwest, change his name to John C. Meserve, the name by which he is known to his associates. Attorney Ralph A. Cusick represented Meserlian.

BONUS AND DEFICIT EQUAL.

Veterans of the World War have drawn $1,090,137,402 from the Treasury since Congress passed the veterans' loan act over the President's veto three months ago. The most liberal estimates of the sum that would be necessary to finance this extravagant measure have been exceeded. Senators and representatives who glibly contradicted the estimates of the Treasury and Gen. Hines may be chagrined to find that their bid for the soldier vote will cost the Government three times as much as some of them imagined.

This enormous payment to veterans constitutes one of the largest items in the national deficit. When Congress voted to increase the loan value of adjusted compensation certificates to 50 per cent the fund which had been set aside for ultimate liquidation of the certificates amounted to only about $750,000,000. Even that was in the form of securities which had to be marketed. Above that amount these loans to veterans constitute an increase in the public debt.

Nearly 2,000,000 veterans have applied for loans, and new applications are being filed at the rate of 35,000 per week. It is now estimated that veterans may draw as much as $1,500,000,000 from the Treasury before their new privileges allowed by Congress have been used up. Such prospects add materially to the threat of higher taxes.

The bonus loan act was disguised as a relief measure, but it is estimated from official sources that while much of the money was used for the payment of existing indebtedness, an enormous percentage went to buy used automobiles. The much-discussed stimulation of business failed to materialize. The net effect of the bonus loans seems to have been a transfer of obligations from private institutions to the Government. Banks are swelled with money waiting to be borrowed, while the Government is heavily in debt. Yet the Government undertakes the responsibility of acting as banker for nearly 2,000,000 men.

Many politicians who fell over each other to vote for the bonus loan are now beginning to clamor against higher taxes. They had no thought of sparing the taxpayer when they were voting to hand out $1,000,000,000 to former soldiers, even though Treasury funds were seriously depleted at that time. No doubt some of these politicians favored the bonus loan for the purpose of embarrassing the administration. They saw in it not only a chance to appease the soldier vote but to add to the financial difficulties of President Hoover and his Cabinet.

In this they will be disappointed, however, for the President did all in his power to stop this piece of extravagance. His veto brings the bonus bobmerang straight back to the politicians who originated it. One senator has already been defeated because he neglected the interests of the people in the hope of currying favor from the veterans. Others will begin to shiver in their boots when they see the size of the stone they have hung around the necks of taxpayers.

WOULD ROB HOME ENTERPRISE.

When politicians get together it is quite natural for them to boost their own party. A gathering of farmers can always be depended upon to demand anything and everything that might give them an advantage in the economic struggle. Merchants, manufacturers, bankers and organized labor all play their own games. The whining about tariffs that is going on this week before the National Foreign Trade Council in New York simply means that importers are no exception to this rule.

Who is it that suggests an extra session of Congress to make a blanket reduction of 25 per cent in all ad valorem duties and of 50 per cent in specific rates? It is Peter Fletcher, president of the National Council of American Importers and Traders. Importers clamor for lower duties as naturally as hungry dogs howl for meat. Of course, it would be good business for them to sweep away the protection which Congress has given to American industry and labor so that they could deluge the country with cheap foreign goods.

Talk of restoring prosperity by knocking down the tariff wall is the most flimsy nonsense that has been heard in the discussion of hard times. Instead of allowing business and industry to correct the maladjustments which brought on hard times, the international fixers merely aim to cover up some of the evidence of those conditions by sending more goods from one country to another. When domestic business recovers and purchasing power is restored to its normal strength international trade will regain its lost momentum as a matter of course. No amount of quackery can make the importers—or the exporters for that matter—prosperous while the rest of the country limps along at a slower pace.

Figures prove conclusively that the decline in foreign trade is proportionate to the falling off of domestic business. The vultures of depression squawk about the difference in the value of exports and imports now and in 1929, ignoring the phenomenal decline in commodity prices which has reduced all values to a lower level. But the public need take no notice of them. If there is any one thing that the American people know, it is that prosperity can't be restored by substituting foreign labor and foreign business for domestic enterprise.

TEN MILES ABOVE EARTH.

Prof. August Piccard's balloon excursion into the stratosphere turned out to be a magnificent adventure. Hermetically sealed in an aluminum compartment, the doughty German scientist and his aid, Charles Kipfer, ascended to heights that have never before been reached by man. What they found in the outer fringe of atmosphere will be chiefly of interest to science, but their dramatic conquest in an unexplored field elicits the interest of all human kind.

The huge balloon barely escaped tragedy at the beginning, and it remained in the air so long that the world feared for the life of the two stratospheric explorers. But those incidents only served to add interest to the exploit. Apparently the balloon remained under control throughout the flight and under control throughout the flight and Prof. Piccard has been spared to give the world a full account of what he experienced some 10 miles above the earth.

If a checking of the instruments confirms Prof. Piccard's statements he must have ascended to nearly 54,000 feet above the earth. The previous record for balloons was set ten years ago by Prof. Berson, also a German, who ascended to 35,424 feet. But airplanes have reached an altitude of 42,250 feet. It is no insignificant achievement to break the world's altitude record by more than 2 miles.

The scientific value of the flight will not be known until the instruments have been taken from the balloon and examined. Science knows little of actual conditions in the stratosphere. Instruments have been sent into it by balloons, but never before has it been observed by individuals with instruments at their command.

Prof. Piccard's contribution to knowledge may be large or it may be small, but he has fearlessly risked his life for the advancement of science and skillfully won. Europe is already proclaiming him "the Columbus of the Stratosphere." His feat will doubtless stimulate new interest in exploration above the clouds.

A FINE AMERICAN SHIP.

Another new ship has been launched at Camden, and soon will be completed to join her sisters in the service of the American Export Lines between the United States and Mediterranean ports. The vessel, christened the Excambion, completes the program of four undertaken by her owners as the feature of an ocean mail contract entered into with the Postoffice Department. Two of the vessels already are in the service, carrying American passengers and American goods to and from France, Italy and Egypt. The third will join them this summer, and the Excambion will be ready for service early in the fall.

Thus there is a concrete example of the results of wise legislation designed to encourage the development of American shipping in foreign trade. A line made up of slow freight steamers, hastily built during the stress of war times, and given its start under Government operation, has been developed into a passenger service with vessels of the latest and best type, operated on a regular schedule. The owners of the Export Line bought eighteen vessels from the Shipping Board in 1925. These they have operated ever since, and in addition, through purchase, charter and construction, have added as many more to their fleet. The result is that American ship service to the Mediterranean is regular and constant.

In the shipyards at Camden where these new vessels have been built some 1,500 men have been employed in their construction for more than a year. Fifteen hundred families have been supplied with sustenance regularly because Congress decided that vessels to carry American goods should be built in American shipyards. Thousands of other families employed in other shipyards of the United States have escaped the rigors of hard times because the policy of encouragement of American shipbuilding made possible the employment of so many men who might otherwise be classed today among the army of unemployed.

The quality of the new liners that are being added to the American Merchant Marine from the yards in Maine, New Jersey, Virginia, Maryland and elsewhere along the Atlantic Coast is highly regarded by shipping people the world over. The Excambion is no exception. She does not claim regal rank as "Queen of the Seas." She is, however, fairly described as a princess, of stately carriage and graceful lines, a fine example of the American type of naval architecture and American engineering skill which, while dormant for years, has never been excelled. She will have a speed of sixteen knots, which is greatly in excess of the minimum set by the Postoffice Department in its contracts for carrying foreign mails. Her cargo spaces will stow 6,000 tons of freight, and her upper decks will have accommodations for 150 passengers.

PAN-AMERICAN MEETINGS.

A group of Latin-American diplomats meeting with Secretary Stimson has drawn up the tentative agenda for the meeting of the seventh Pan-American conference to be held in Montevideo in 1933. The list of subjects to be discussed as proposed in the meeting here is by no means final, as it must be submitted through the Pan-American Union to the 21 governments composing the Union, who all have the right of adding to the questions to be considered.

Echoes of the Washington program session indicate an optimistic feeling that the next conference may prove to be a harmonious one marking something like a new era of friendship, particularly a warmer feeling toward the United States, based on the feeling that recent American action in Nicaragua indicated the inauguration of a less aggressive or less domineering policy in the Caribbean.

This expression of confidence in a harmonious meeting, however, takes little account of current feeling as it is reported in Chile and Argentina. It seems probable that both countries will precipitate debate in active opposition to present United States tariff regulations. It was Honorio Pueyrredon, delegate from Argentina, whose attacks on American tariffs virtually disrupted the last Pan-American conference in Havana in 1928.

Ambassador Manuel E. Malbran, interviewed in New York, voices the resentment that still exists in the southern republic against protective customs here and gives warning that his country may be required to protect and develop her own industry with high tariff walls, eventually causing a loss to the United States of a good market for manufactures.

The agitation throughout South America for an Inter-American customs union, in which Chile has taken a prominent part, is still a live question in South America, although many practical difficulties are found in any general plan covering the continent, with its vast extent and poor means of intercommunication. It seems more reasonable to suppose that such projects will resolve themselves into regional agreements among groups of nations that are closely related.

If the question of the customs union is brought to the Pan-American meeting, with the suggested enlargement of asking the United States and Canada to join the doors would be opened wide for the customary assaults upon American policies and tariffs. It may be heard, in fact, before the meeting of the Union, as the Pan-American commercial conference is scheduled to meet in Washington in October and delegates from the countries that are disposed to blame their present economic ills upon the tariff policy of the United States, will have opportunity to voice anew their sentiments regarding this country.

CALVIN COOLIDGE SAYS:

Northampton, Mass., May 28—Secretary Mellon has convincingly stated the approaching necessity of devising a tax system when business becomes normal to make national revenues more nearly depression proof. Assessing taxes where they can best be borne is sound enough. The rich are necessarily the immediate source of the income taxes. But mixed up with our tax laws have been certain social theories for dispossessing the rich in the name of reform rather than for revenue.

Now when we especially need surplus money for relief purposes, we find Treasury receipts greatly reduced. The vacillating income of persons and corporations does not supply certain sources of revenue. Taxes should provide a sure income and a balanced budget for the Government without reference to social theories. It would be cheaper for the people of small incomes to pay one direct tax to the Government than many indirect taxes on what they consume. A broad base of income assessments enabled Great Britain to balance its recent budget with little increased taxes. If government is to be able to relieve future depressions and encourage business it must first provide a revenue system that will not itself be depressed, and also demonstrate ability to pay its own bills from current receipts.

GREATER THAN MEDICI

From the New York Herald Tribune.

America is the classic land of public libraries for general readers, but it is also, George F. Whicher reminds us in the June Atlantic Monthly, increasingly the home of great semipublic collections which serve primarily as repositories for literary treasure and as centers for advanced scholarship. The John Carter Brown Library at Providence, and the William L. Clements Library at Ann Arbor, vast collections of significant Americana; the rich Morgan Library in this city; the Henry E. Huntington Library at San Marino, Calif., and the Folger Shakespeare Library, now rising opposite of the Library of Congress in Washington, already rank in their special ways among the great libraries of the world.

Henry Clay Folger was president and later chairman of the board of the Standard Oil Co. of New York, and it is worth pausing to note, as Mr. Whicher does, that virtually all these great libraries are the achievements of the much-despised "materialistic" American business man. Mr. Folger did not commission an agent to make his purchases for him; he quietly made his own amazing purchases, and it is still true that the only catalogue of his treasures is his own manuscript notes. The Medicis probably knew less of the art treasures they encouraged and accumulated.

How rich a treasure Mr. Folger gathered Mr. Whicher makes clear. It includes no less than 79 of the 200-odd known copies of the first folio of Shakespeare, and generous representations of subsequent editions; including a wealth of association copies. Here, for instance, are the poet Gray's "Shakespeare," Mrs. Siddon's copy, and Coleridge's copy, each with their notes; President John Adams' copy of the first American edition; one volume of George Washington's set; and Abraham Lincoln's annotated edition of 1835; hundreds of thousands of playbills, stage properties, stage manuscripts. For the most part the library's wealth is such as only scholars can appreciate; but even laymen can appreciate the significance of the fact that the greatest Shakespeare collection in the world, to which scholars of the entire world will instinctively turn, was collected, without public knowledge of the fact, by an American oil merchant, and is to find its permanent home on Capitol Hill in Washington.

If the King Can Do No Wrong, Only a Whim Can Make Him Do Right.

By ROBERT QUILLEN

A CHRONIC ailment, said President Adams, is an aid to longevity.

The cracked pitcher outlasts others because it is given greater care.

When influenza becomes epidemic, the first to die are robust men proud of their strength. These scorn precaution and thus invite disaster, while weaker men take counsel of their fears and remain in bed until the danger is past.

Discretion inspires no lyrics, for it is born of fear; but fear itself is commendable when it serves as a substitute for wisdom.

While men in their present imperfect state are so little influenced by reason, fear alone can save them from the penalties of folly.

How many men would be as decent as they are if they did not fear future punishment, their neighbors or the law?

When you take away the dread of consequences, you destroy the chief prop of virtue.

That explains why people "can't stand prosperity."

It is the absence of fear that makes success a destroyer of character.

The handicap of the rich man's son is not the softening effect of luxury, but the knowledge that his bread will be buttered regardless of what he does or fails to do.

The genius perhaps requires no spur except his natural urge to do good work; but no ordinary man will do his utmost unless he is afraid of losing his job.

How many brilliant men win fame and fortune and then go promptly to the devil because they have nothing to fear!

"My reputation is made and my income assured," says the artist, "so now I can afford to relax and enjoy the fruits of my labor. If I get drunk at intervals, whose business is it except mine? I have arrived."

And the rich man's son answers: "I, too, can break the rules with impunity. They can't fire me because the old man owns the business, and I'll always have plenty of money whether I make good or not."

Necessity is the mother of virtue.

Only the man who must make good to hold his job has a fair chance to survive.

Success is the final test of character.

No weakling can survive it.

Whom the gods would destroy they first make independent of want, police annoyance and public opinion.

PRO AND CON

Press Comment Upon Acts and Actors in the Great American Show, "Politics."

No Extra Session.

Chicago Tribune.

President Hoover will not call a special session of Congress. He says he does not know of anything which would more distu. the healing processes of the economic situation. "We can not legislate ourselves out of a world economic depression; we can and will work ourselves out of it." This brief, sound statement disposes of the Government medicine man and charm worker for the rest of the year. That worker can not appear with his magic until December.

The United States politically is not committed to an unqualified doctrine of laissez faire, but, regardless of considerable government organization of business, the main reliance of the country is upon the operation of individual human intelligence which respects elemental economic rules.

Test of Citizenship.

Philadelphia Public Ledger.

The nubbin of the opinion is contained in these words:

"It is not within the province of the courts to make bargains with those who seek naturalization. They must accept the grant and take the oath in accordance with the terms fixed by the law or forego the privilege of citizenship. There is no middle choice."

In spite of the dissenting opinion—and Chief Justice Hughes was among the dissenters—this must now be regarded as the proper interpretation of the law as it stands, that defense of the country contemplates the possible bearing of arms by all citizens. And with that law Congress is not likely to tamper.

It Makes a Difference.

Minneapolis Journal.

William Gibbs McAdoo, who is probably wondering whether there is a chance for his rehabilitation as a Democratic presidential possibility, breaks into the news with the declaration that prohibition is a "sham issue."

Former Senator James A. Reed, of Missouri, who also has his lightning rod up, is already doing a little stumping for himself, with modification as his paramount issue.

Politics does more than make strange bedfellows; it makes strange inconsistencies, too. Seven years ago William G. McAdoo was deadlocking the 1924 Democratic national convention against Al Smith, almost solely on the liquor issue. And three years ago modification was anything but a paramount issue to Jim Reed, who was trying to persuade the Houston convention to forget about modification and Al Smith, and to nominate him on the farm relief issue.

When prohibition seemed to promise a nomination to McAdoo, then, of course, prohibition was a prime issue. When a soft pedal on prohibition was the only hope that Jim Reed had of winning a nomination, then prohibition wasn't any issue at all. Circumstances are continually altering cases.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Booze Drinking Much Less Than in the Roaring Old Days, Says a Veteran Eye Witness.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: That is a timely and nicely suggestive letter by W. T. T., in which he objects to the statement of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment that the American public now boozes at a cost of $3,000,000,000 a year.

In preprohibition days I used to get disgusted at the exaggerated statements and claims of Antisaloon League fanatics, and their wet opponents in these days of enforced dryness are just as bad.

W. T. T. suggests an enlightening contrast between then and now. When, in face of the preposterous Against the Prohibition Amendment figures, he says: "There may be 2,000,000 alcoholics in the United States who from day to day habitually break the prohibition law but I very much doubt it."

Set all the "alcoholics" who today patronize the precarious speakeasies and bootleggers over against the countless patrons of licensed bars in the days when every other man you met enjoyed at least his one, two or three beers per diem, and I think the mental picture will convince anyone but a Raskob wet that the "full bowl and steady roll" of yesterday is not approached by today's illegal flood.

Before this became a legally dry community, there were between 600 and 700 licensed rum mills in the District of Columbia. With few exceptions they made a good profit, and the business of the greater part of them was flourishing. Their run of customers was so steady that their owners could tell almost to a dollar what the receipts would be from day to day. I knew one saloonkeeper, whose customers were mostly workingmen, who was not satisfied if his receipts of a Saturday alone ran less than $1,500. And there were hundreds of other places like that.

Can the present illegal liquor business make anywhere near such an overflowing showing as that? I trow not. And what is true of Washington, in this respect, is likely enough true of the country at large.

The eighteenth amendment may have caused a great increase of lawbreaking, but in the decrease of dram-drinking it has been a conspicuous success.

Fisherman Williams Deplores Destruction of Good Sport on the Potomac.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The Post editorial, "Keep Public Waters Clean," was read with approval. In addition to the various evil effects of "noxious wastes that are dumped into streams," the editorial might have mentioned how they have spoiled the sport of angling in the section of the Potomac immediately adjacent to the city.

A few years ago I used to take a piscatorial day off now and then, pretty sure that I could hook a bigmouth bass or so in the Tidal Basin or from the seawall around East Potomac Park. It was restful sport and good for the soul. There were hundreds if not thousands who took advantage of these fine fishing spots during the year and their number was increasing.

Since then, however, the fishing has gone from bad to worse as the river has been more and more polluted. There came a time when you would sometimes find the surface of the Tidal Basin half covered with a thick oily scum and that was the beginning of the end. But I am hoping that conditions may yet be restored, so that in my old age I can again feel the thrill of a finny gamester's strike while seated on a park bench almost at the foot of the Washington Monument.

Statements on Drink Consumption Are Pure Guesswork.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: How can any living mortal, let alone organization, send out such a statement as the Association Opposed to Prohibition, saying the drink consumption in 1929 was thus and so and is today thus and so?

The Government says frankly it does not know. Exact statements are lacking for want of data. The published figures are pure guesswork.

THE ARTIST.

He took his little and was glad.
And never wished that more he had.
It mattered not what others spent.
With paint and brush he was content.
And seemed to find in fruits and flowers
A deeper happiness than ours.

His wants were simple and but few,
The luxuries he never knew,
Or if he did he passed them by
As if acquaintance he'd deny.
His was a little world apart,
Where triumph was a work of art.

His speech seemed strange. It oft appeared
At what men valued most he sneered.
The high rewards by commerce earned
He turned his back upon and spurned,
Preferring in his quarters quaint
The lonely luxury of paint.

Those three grim ogres of distress,
Hunger and cold and shabby dress,
Which most men fear, he smiled upon
And never wished them to be gone,
Saying: "From all that comfort brings
But little inspiration springs."

Men who are slaves unto the purse,
Fancied him stubborn and perverse,
Because no goal would he pursue
Within the larger world they knew,
But paint and brush and loveliness
Gave him such joys they couldn't guess.

WOMEN GATHERING FOR PARTY MEETING

Sessions Will Open Today at Dodge Hotel; Dinner Is Planned Tonight.

Two days of almost unceasing activity are in prospect for the many prominent women gathering here today for the party workers conference of the National Woman's Party, which will continue through tomorrow.

Addresses by various leaders and open forum discussions will occupy the conferees today, interspersed with a large informal luncheon at noon. These affairs will all take place at the Dodge Hotel and will be open to the general public.

One of the principal events of the gathering will be the National Woman's Party dinner tonight at the Dodge Hotel. Ruth Hale, founder and president of the Lucy Stone League, will be the principal speaker and will also act as toastmistress. A number of other nationally known women will speak at this affair, including Mrs. Virginia White Speel, Republican national committeewoman for the District; Mrs. Fleta Campbell Springer, writer; Mrs. Rebekah Greathouse, assistant District attorney, and several others.

Tomorrow will present a series of round table discussions on activities of the organization. A large garden party at the Alva Belmont House will wind up the conference tomorrow afternoon. At this event Miss Doris Stevens, internationally known feminist, will deliver an address which will be broadcast over a Nationwide radio hookup. Miss Stevens has recently been appointed as a member of the League of Nations international committee on women and will sail for Europe shortly to attend the first meeting of that body.

Senora Herminia A. de Davila, wife of the Chilean Ambassador, and Mme. Oliverira de Lima, representative of Brazil on the Inter-American Commission of Women, will be co-guests of honor with Miss Stevens at the garden party.

Neanderthal Skull Found in Palestine

Scientists Find Evidence of Race Dating Back 60,000 Years.

New Haven, Conn., May 28 (A.P.).—Dr. George Grant McCurdy, of Yale University, today reported the discovery of a mass burial of eight or ten interments dating from earlier than 10,000 B. C., and also the skull of a neanderthal child, in excavations at Athlit, at the foot of Mount Carmel, in Palestine.

Dr. McCurdy is director of the American School of Prehistoric Research, which, jointly with the British School of Archeology at Jerusalem, has been carrying on excavations in this vicinity for the past three seasons.

Remains found in the Athlit vicinity in previous explorations were for the most part of the Mesolithic Age and the Cro-Magnon race, dating from 15,000 to 30,000 years ago. But with the finding of the neanderthal skull, remains have been found of a primitive race roaming this region from 60,000 to 100,000 years ago.

Istanbul, Turkey, May 28 (A.P.).—The brutal killing of five children, three women and two men by a party of unidentified assailants was reported today in dispatches from Diarbekr, in Armenia.

Japanese Royal Couple Leaves U. S. for Home

San Francisco, May 28 (A.P.).—Prince Takamatsu, brother of the Emperor of Japan, and his bride, Princess Kikuko, bade farewell to America and entered the concluding stage of their world honeymoon today as they sailed for home on the N. Y. K. liner Chichibu Maru.

Army, Navy and civic officials and a large crowd of civilians were at the dock to wish them bon voyage. A group of Army airplanes escorted the ship through the Golden Gate. As the liner passed Fort Scott, cannon boomed a salute of twenty-one guns.

What IS COST in heating?

[$20 DOWN WILL INSTALL A JANITROL GAS CONVERSION BURNER]

THE cost of heating one's home is a big factor in the family budget. So if you are thinking of converting your present furnace, it would be wise to consider the cost—from all angles.

The mere price of fuel is one thing. Initial cost of the heating unit and the expense it incurs for replacements and adjustments is another.

Automatic Gas Heat, with a Janitrol Gas Conversion Burner, costs $200 to install—far less than any other automatic heating unit. The exceedingly low cost of the unit itself makes maintenance expenses, even over a period of 10 to 20 years, comparable with—even less than—other types of automatic heating.

So—when the question of cost is discussed, remember: Automatic Gas Heat with a Janitrol Gas Conversion Burner costs less to install, costs no more to operate in the long run and is completely automatic. You don't have to bother with fuel bins, fuel storage, or complicated machinery. Gas Heat is the only completely automatic heating system on the market today. Hundreds of Washington home owners, whose heating problems were identical to yours, analyzed these points and installed Janitrol.

If you are thinking of converting your present furnace to Automatic Heat by all means do it with a Janitrol Gas Conversion Burner.

The new low rate for househeating comes out at approximately 75 cents per thousand cubic feet as compared with the old rate of $1. Twenty dollars down, and not another cent until next September will put Janitrol in your home, with no extra charge for financing. Call NAtional 8280 or mail a postcard to the House-heating Department, 413 Tenth Street N. W. We will be glad to give you a reliable estimate of cost. There is no obligation.

Let Janitrol be your furnace man. Gas Heat can be quickly and inexpensively installed in a single day. Call National 8280 for a reliable estimate of the cost of heating your particular home.

Tennis Match Witnessed by Gay Throngs

Beautiful Weather Brings Out Gallery Donned in Many Colors.

THE Davis cup players drew glorious tennis weather for the first round of the three-day matches at the Chevy Chase Club yesterday. Warm sunshine and a high breeze made perfect the day for members of the Argentine and United States teams engaged in the tourney. The women in the enthusiastic gallery were arrayed in keeping with the bright day, and made a colorful picture in their sport frocks of pastel shades.

The attractive Junior League girls in their smart green uniforms with tiny white and yellow organdie aprons and caps dispensed drinks and cigarettes to the crowds that surrounded them during each intermission.

The group included Miss Laura Tuckerman, chairman, assisted by Miss Dorothy Hill, Miss Betty Kennedy, Miss Anne Larner, Miss Caroline Wilcox, Mrs. Jasper DuBose, Miss Elizabeth Dunlop, Miss Katherine Martin, Miss Rosa Hayes, Miss Marjorie Talman, Miss Elizabeth Brawner, Mrs. Elmore Cropley, Mrs. Heywood Newbold, Miss Beatrice Patton.

Also Miss Neville Gherardi, Miss Anne Johnstone, Miss Rebecca Davidson, Mrs. Marshall O. Exnicios, Miss Marcie Chandler, Miss Virginia Glazebrook, Miss Mary Louise Johnson, Miss Louise Hoehling, Miss Barendina Gardener and Mrs. Frank Haynes.

Mrs. Hoover, an ardent tennis fan, was unable to attend because of previous engagements, but the presidential box had been turned over to Mrs. Patrick J. Hurley, wife of the Secretary of War, who wore a costume of blue and white print with a white straw hat. Among those with Mrs. Hurley in the box were Representative and Mrs. Robert Low Bacon, the Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Francis White and Capt. Joel T. Boone. Mrs. Bacon wore a smart frock of beige and white crepe with a large brown hat. Mrs. White was in a dark blue printed chiffon.

The Ambassador of Argentina, Senor Don Manuel Malbran, left Washington Wednesday for New York on official business, and so was not present to see his team "put up a good fight," but he will return to town in time to attend the matches tomorrow.

Senora de Malbran, wearing a black and white figured crepe and small black turban, occupied the embassy box, and had as her guests Mr. and Mrs. Charles Landa, the First Secretary of the Embassy; Senor Don Pablo Munoz, and her two daughters, the Senoritas Malbran. In the next box were the members of the Argentine team who did not play yesterday and their guests. Other members of the embassy staff, including the Second Secretary, Senor Don Eduardo Vivot, and the Attache, Senor Don Manuel Olazabal, had guests in still another box.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Norment had with them in their box Mr. and Mrs. Chester Snow and Mrs. William McClellan Ritter. Mrs. Norment wore a sports costume of nasturtium yellow with a hat to match.

Mr. and Mrs. John Arthur Hinckley were in a box with the latter's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Blaise de Sibour; Mr. and Mrs. William R. Mann, Miss Helen Wardman, Miss Katharine Wilkins and Mr. Spottswood White.

Mlle. Reine Claudel, daughter of the French Ambassador, a tennis player herself, was an interested spectator, and looked attractive in a white sports dress with a white turban wound about her head. Maj. Georges Thenault, Air Attache of the French Embassy, was there with Mme. Thenault. Both are well-known tennis players, and good judges of the splendid games played yesterday.

Others seen in the "bleachers" were the Attache of the British Embassy and Mrs. Harold H. Sims, the latter wearing a wide blue hat and a blue and red printed chiffon; the Commercial Secretary of the Embassy and Mrs. Arthur Pack, and the other Commercial Secretary, Mr. Leander McCormick-Goodhart.

Miss Hume's Wedding Is Pretty Event

Mr. Clifford Makes Her Bride in Georgetown Church.

Fashionable Washington journeyed to old Christ Church in Georgetown yesterday, where Miss Jeanette T. Hume, daughter of Mrs. Rawlins Hume, became the bride of Mr. Nathaniel Stone Clifford, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles P. Clifford, of Milton, Mass. The ceremony was performed at 4:30 o'clock by the Rev. John Temple, rector of the church. Australian fern and lilies banked the altar and tall standards of pink snapdragon gave color to the floral background. Clusters of Bermuda lilies marked the pews.

The bride entered with her uncle, Mr. James B. L. Orme, of New York, who gave her away. Her gown was of heavy antique satin ivory tone, the yoke and sleeves finished with rose point, the skirt sweeping to a long train. A veil of tulle fell from the cap of lace which fitted closely to the hair, and she carried lilies of the valley and jasmine, with sprays of orchids falling in shower effect.

Miss Elizabeth Hume, maid of honor, and Miss Mary Murray Hume, sisters of the bride, were attendants. They wore frocks of mousseline de soie over taffeta. They carried bouquets of snapdragon shading from lemon to gold combined with blue delphinium.

YOUR NAME

WHAT DOES IT MEAN?

By HARRY A. DEFERRARI, Ph.D.

THE family name "Harley" is of English origin. It means "the hare-lea," that is "the meadow frequented by hares," and it indicates an original place of residence. There are several villages named Harley in England, and, as usual, a former residence in one of those villages has frequently given rise to the family name. The place-name and the family name have a common origin and meaning. Instances of this name in early English records are Henry de Herley, Clemens de Herleghe and Adam de Herleg (1273), Matilda Herlay (1379), Nicholas Harlye (1646), and John Harley (1743). In Ireland this name has sometimes been adopted by families who were originally called "O Hearghaile." "O Hearghaile" is a variation of "O Fearghaile," which means "the descendant of Fearghal." The personal name "Fearghal" means "supervalor."

In spite of the resemblance between the family name "Herlihy" and certain old forms of "Harley," the two names have wholly different origins and meanings. "Herlihy" is the modern form of the original Irish "O Hairfhlaitha," which means "the descendant of Iarfhlaith." "Iarfhlaith" was an old personal name meaning "the underlord."

The family name "Hargrave" is of English origin. It occurs with a great many variations of which the commonest are "Hargraves," "Hargrove," "Hargreave" and "Hargroves." Its source is the Old English "hara-graf," which means "the hare-grove," that is "the grove frequented by hares," and it indicates an original place of residence. There are several villages named "Hargrave" and "Hargrove" in England. A former residence in one of those villages has frequently given rise to the family name. An English record of the year 1296 includes the names of William de Hargreave and Richard de Haregreave.

What Today Means to You

By MARY BLAKE

"GEMINI."

IF May 29 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 11:10 a. m. to 1:15 p. m., and from 3:30 p. m. to 7 p. m. The danger hours from 8:30 a. m. to 10:30 a. m. and from 5 p. m. to 11 p. m.

May 29 denotes, astrologically, sudden changes of plans, brought about by circumstances over which you have no control. There will be little real work accomplished. In the evening, conditions are "set fair" and favor social activities and entertainments.

Children born on this May 29 will be highly strung, and should not be judged by general standards. They will be different, and require different treatment. They will prove to be abler students of nature, than books. Their dispositions will be emotional, passionate and sincere.

Born on May 29, you will have by no means a prosaic life. It will be full of "ups and downs," and eventful, and not till you have attained years of discretion, will it be successful. You were created with a spirit of adventure, and if circumstances have permitted you to follow your inclinations, you will have travelled much and seen much. Although easily adaptable to environment, you are never content to remain in one place or stick at one occupation for any length of time. You always seek change of scenery, other associates and new enterprises. No beaten track ever satisfies.

Gifted with a keen intellect and very susceptible to impressions, your varied experience will fit you for work—when and where you settle—and you will have a better equipment than those who have never strayed from home. You will bring to bear on your job originality, and you will bend a business to your will, rather than allow a business to bend you to its will. Herein will lie your success.

Those born on May 29 should not marry until the wanderlust is out of their system, as only discord can result if they feel themselves committed to obligations under which they will chafe.

Successful people born May 29:

Patrick Henry, statesman and orator.

James J. Mapes, agricultural chemist.

Eugene F. Ware, lawyer and statesman.

Charles R. Van Hise geologist.

Dion Boulcault, actor.

Charles F. Richardson, professor of English at Dartmouth College.

Jane Interprets the MODE

New York, May 28.

IT was bound to happen! As soon as this multi-color-in-one-costume idea came into our lives all sorts of interesting developments came with it. First there were just the jacket and skirt and blouse color contrasts, aided, and abetted by contrasting accessories. Then couturiers made frocks with their color contrast in belt and "lingerie touches." After which enterprising creators made the frock itself of several contrasting but harmonizing shades—such as the model I told you of which started out with brown as the skirt, had its middle section of orange and its upper part of a lighter brown—and as a finishing touch was accompanied by a bolero jacket in both orange and brown. And very pretty it was, too.

Then again, there are the lovely examples of just the two-colors in one frock idea that Champcommunal and others are showing. The frocks in navy blue wool crepe, for instance, with a very wide mesh wool lace yoke and sleeves in white. In some of these the white yoke extends almost to the waistline but not quite and give the dress and the wearer both an awfully summery and youthful appearance.

And now we come to the real point of this, which I started out to say was bound to happen—the guimpe dresses. 'Member when we used to wear them years and years ago. Oh, but the modern versions are so much more graceful and smart. Lucile has one in red woolen—very light weight, of course, and the skirt goes up over the shoulder in rather narrow shoulder straps, leaving a deep V back and front, if you get what I mean. A red-dotted white crepe blouse with short sleeves is worn under this and a red woolen jacket accompanies it.

And Tollmann has a pink crepe de chine printed in tiny sprigs of pink flowers. The bottom of the skirt is a deepish pink shading up to a paler pink where it crosses over the shoulders and the blouse worn beneath is printed with the same sprigs of flowers but in the very palest of pinks. And very demure and innocent the effect is, too!

* * * *

Have you seen any draped evening gowns lately? Oh, yes, and have you seen any pale blue evening dresses recently? Well, you probably have, but I doubt if they have been as charming as the one I sketched today from Philippe et Gaston, for lots of reasons. And the chief reason is that it is made of pale blue jersey! Yes—it's actually jersey—very fine and soft and drapable, of course, but wool jersey just the same. O-o-oh but it's lovely, and its utter lack of sheen or lustre simply emphasizes its many interesting points. The decolletage is unusual, being cowl in front and deep V in back, and there is a double skirt arrangement. The upper skirt comes slightly above the knee in front, and sweeps behind in a graceful short train!

* * * *

Why not look for jersey evening gowns in the fashionable shops near you? You'll soon see it used in many unusual ways.

* * * *

The women of Tahiti and, in fact, of all the South Sea Islands, wear a flower hung over the left ear to signify that they are of a marriageable age. Milady Moderne wears a novel earring, literally hung over her tiny ear, and one only at that, in the illustration in the circle. And just to add to the illusion perhaps, the earring is of black and gold leaves!

* * * *

The Dare department of The Washington Post has a leaflet for you this week that I prepared by popular demand! Yes, honestly now, so many of you readers have asked me to design more smart bags and pocketbooks for you that I just had to! 'N' besides, it was great fun, because this year's models in the bag world are the cleverest things yet! You'll find the instructions very clear and easy to follow, because Mamzelle and I took all our smartest bags and worked hard at them until we had exact copies—and then wrote very detailed and foolproof directions for making them.

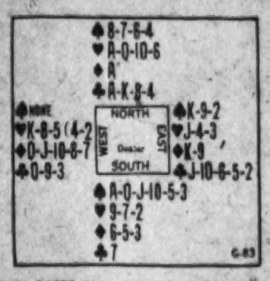
WORK ON BRIDGE

CONTRACT BRIDGE.



WITH the above hand at Contract Bridge, South would bid one Spade. The soundness of bidding one initially on an unsupported five-card suit headed by Ace-Queen-Jack is questionable; but in this case South has six Spades and an extra honor in the shape of the Ten. West doubtless would bid two Diamonds, although the bid might cause East to overestimate West's high-card strength. North could bid three Diamonds or five Spades.

The bid of five Spades would show great strength and invite South to bid for a slam, but would not indicate where North's strength lay. The bid of three Diamonds would show the probability of a slam at Spades (partner's suit) and announce that no Diamond tricks would be lost. Over-calling in the adverse declaration would show that North either held no Diamonds and had sufficient trumps to ruff as often as might be necessary, or that he had the singleton. Ace of Diamonds and trump length. This type of overcall always implies slam probabilities. Following North's three Diamonds, South would bid three Spades and North five; South then would bid six.

West would lead the Queen of Diamonds. North would win and so trick 2 lead a Spade which South's Queen would win, thus insuring the capture of East's King by another finesse. To trick 3 South would lead a Club, win in dummy, and lead a second Spade and finesse; then the Spade Ace which would capture East's King. To trick 6, South would lead a Heart and, being able to discard one Heart on a winning Club in dummy. Declarer would not take the double finesse but would win with the Queen. After that North's Heart Ace would take a trick, and North would lead the Ace of Clubs, giving South a Heart discard. Then a third Heart would be led on which West would be obliged to play the King, and South would ruff. South would lead a Diamond which North would ruff and cash his good Heart, South discarding a Diamond, and North and South would take thirteen tricks for which they would have had no license to bid. Even bidding a small slam would be a bit venturesome.

Indoor and Outdoor Gardens

By JANE LESLIE KIFT

CENTER-CITY GARDENS.

NOT so many years ago center-city gardens were few and far between. Now they are springing up on all sides. There is hardly a city block that does not boast of one or two gardens. Some of these gardens are commonplace, some very lovely, but all are a step in the right direction. We need these outdoor rooms in which to rest and relax after the strenuous hours each day which we devote to outside activities.

Center-city gardening is not always easy, but it can be done even though the bit of land be only 20 by 30 feet, "a sunless hole in the very heart of a big city." To accomplish results, we should analyze conditions before making a start.

The first obstacle we meet is usually shade. The tiny plot at the rear of the average city home is invariably shaded not by trees, which could be pruned to admit sunlight, but by high board fences and still higher walls of nearby buildings over which we have no jurisdiction. So all we can do about this phase of our garden-making is to eliminate sun-lovers and plant only such vines, shrubs and trees as will tolerate shade, and depend on other things such as flagstone walks, painted fences, trellises and colorful garden urns for garden atmosphere.

Then we must accept the fact that the plot will receive only a minimum amount of rain, for the height of the nearby buildings will prevent any but vertical rains from reaching the ground and we all know how small a percentage of rain falls vertically. This difficulty need give us no alarm, for it can be overcome by the constant use of the garden hose.

The garden hose also overcomes the results of the dust-laden, smoky atmosphere. Its constant use will keep the foliage of our garden clean and shiny and the pores of the plants, through which they breathe, open.

The soil, which is invariably poor, should be removed and replaced by well-fertilized soil. This may seem expensive, but will repay you. For a garden with little sunlight color the walls a cream yellow, pink or robin's-egg blue to make things look colorful, as you can expect few flowers.

Where there is excessive shade, such shrubs as Riegel's privet, California privet, rhododendrons and barberry will be sure to do well. For flowers I should suggest forget-me-nots, myrtle, ferns, violets, spring bulbs and tuberous-rooted begonias. For vines, Kudzu (Japanese), Dutchman's pipe, ampelopsis, English ivy and euonymous; for trees, dwarf horse chestnut, magnolia, maple, catalpa, beech and willow. While these trees will do well under city conditions, the average city plot is too small to admit of trees.

(Copyright, 1931.)

All readers' questions on growing and care of indoor and outdoor flowers and floral decorations for social functions will be answered by Miss Kift, directly in this column if addressed in care of The Washington Post, or directly to readers if a self-addressed, stamped envelope is supplied.

Wives of Tomorrow

FRANCES M'DONALD

Why the Panic?

DEAR Frances McDonald: Having read the wonderful advice which you have given others, I would like to present my case to you.

Now I am a girl of 26 years, not attractive, but dress well, belong to clubs, study music and attend many musical concerts. In spite of the fact that I have always tried to please everybody that I have met, yet I am blessed with very few intimate girl friends and no boy friends.

However, last year I did meet a fine young man at a club meeting. Now he lives about 40 miles from Boston. He is the only man who ever appealed to me. We have met only about three times at the club, but each time I have had a strong desire to run away from his sight before he discovers that I care a great deal about him.

Now our club is going to have just one more meeting before the season closes and I would like very much if you would kindly advise me what to do. ANNA.

Why all the panic? Calm down, calm down. And when the hero appears at the club, wave a careless hand, beckon him hither, and tell him you are going to have a few of the club members to tea on some certain Sunday afternoon. Then say "4 o'clock and don't be late." And let it go at that. If he comes, all right. If he does not, better yet. Having the people to tea is a good idea anyway. You need more social contacts—or, more exactly speaking, closer social contacts. You dash from club to club and concert to concert, always one of a crowd, never really acting as an individual.

When you are a hostess you have no time to be self-conscious, for you have to put others at ease and see that their wants are attended to. You will be at your best. And you will after a time find that you are a different person. If you are one of the many who feel unequal to the task of pouring a cup of tea for a few friends, just snap out of it. It is all a question of habit. If you had been pouring tea all your life you could not be more at ease than you will be after the first time you try it. And every one expands under the influence of the fragrant cup and a delicate sandwich—even total strangers enjoy themselves and where you all have so much in common there will not be a dull moment.

Incidentally, I believe your man will come., for men whose tastes are along the lines of music and the arts, do not enjoy the forms of entertainment that suffice for others, and welcome such hours as your little tea would afford. Were he a different type, afternoon tea would be about the last thing on earth that I would suggest.

The chief thing is for you to stop feeling so foolish. Evidently you have no brothers. Brothers are such heaven sent things. They keep a woman normal. No girl brought up by brothers ever goes into a panic over a mere man. She knows that after all he probably wakes up with his hair in his eyes, leaves father all over the bathroom, and bolts his food if not watched. It's a big help on the way to one's final destiny.

In a word, just come out of the trance, say hello, and make a date. The rest is in the hands of the fates—and quite beyond this column's lengthy reach. Do let us know what happens. Or better yet invite us to the tea!

About The Showshops

With NELSON B. BELL

INSTEAD of bearing down with the usual emphasis upon the merit of the product to be released six months or a year from now, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, at the moment, is stressing the excellence of its pictures to be seen on the screens of the country between May 30 and the August dog days. Ten feature productions are definitely scheduled for presentation during the summer. Here they are:

Joan Crawford's new starring film is "This Modern Age," adapted from the College Humor serial by Mildred Cram and directed by Nick Grinde. This goes on the market tomorrow.

"Five and Ten," adapted from the Fannie Hurst novel, will be the seventh picture in which Marion Davies has been directed by Robert Z. Leonard. Leslie Howard, Richard Bennett and Irene Rich are in the cast.

William Haines will be seen as "Just a Gigolo," the screen version of the stage play, "Dancing Partner."

"A Free Soul" is the picture Norma Shearer completed just before departing for her latest European vacation. It is based on the Broadway stage hit and was directed by Clarence Brown.

"The Great Lover," remembered as a Leo Ditrichstein success, another June release, has in its cast Adolphe Menjou, Neil Hamilton, Irene Dunn, Olga Baclanova, long absent from the screen; Ernest Torrence and Cliff Edwards.

The new Marie Dressler-Polly Moran vehicle will be another Chuck Reisner production, "Politics."

"Horseflesh" is the title of a July release now being put in preparation under the directorship of Charles Brabin.

Buster Keaton's new starring picture, "Sidewalks of New York," is being directed by the two men who have made such doggone good barkies, Jules White and Zion Myers.

Another July release is Ramon Novarro's "A Son of India," in which he will be supported by Madge Evans and Conrad Nagel, with Jacques Feyder, noted French director, handling the production.

"The Man in Possession" is Robert Montgomery's new individual starring vehicle and is tentatively scheduled for August release.

Not such a bad summer!

I assume that Ian Keith and his equally distinguished wife, Ethel Clayton, are out for some kind of a record. In San Francisco a few days ago Mr. Keith announced that he and Mrs. Keith had agreed to separate for the third time in their three years of married—in a manner of speaking—bliss. Both Keith and Miss Clayton denied that a divorce was contemplated, but insisted that a third reconciliation was highly probable.

I don't know how it is out on the Coast, but here in the East, as I understand it, three strikes are out!

Johnny Marvin's engagement at the Fox ended last night. Dr. Cheer's prescriptions having proved something less than 100 proof in the audience's laboratory tests.

Speaking of the Fox, Bob Hamilton, the deservedly popular wizard of the console, has prepared a special Memorial Day screen-and-organ feature for tomorrow. The pictorial portion of the novelty is said to be a beautiful tribute to the men and women who have given their lives for the Stars and Stripes, and the stirring sound accompaniment to be effectively augmented by Mr. Hamilton and the three-manual Wurlitzer.

Since you have betrayed your interest by asking—or have I confused you with the man from the tax collector's office?—it is true that a new burlesque circuit that would include about 30 theaters in key cities between New York and Chicago is now being planned by Billy Minsky, I. H. Herk and Joseph Weinstock. Mr. Herk, as of course you know, is president of the Mutual Burlesque Association, while the Messrs. Weinstock and Minsky recently installed a burlesque entertainment at the Republic Theater on West Forty-second street in New York City. The new wheel is expected to begin to revolve on Labor Day.

In the meantime, you may smoke if you like.

In case you are searching around for a good book, I am enabled, through the courtesy of Mr. Offutt, of the art department—and I think any borrowed book ought to be returned within a period of six months, don't you?—to recommend "The Square Circle," by Denis Mackaill, who rates mention in this column on the outside chance that he may be a brother, or a cousin, or an uncle, or something of Dorothy's.

Endowed with a lively sense of humor that is utterly delightful, keen in characterization and quaintly British with it all, Mackaill has produced an absolutely unique bit of contemporaneous fiction in that it is wholly free from salacious, or even indelicate, suggestion. Just a good book.

The title? Oh, you'll find out.

And don't forget to put out the flag—provided you can discover whereabouts in the front yard they sank that metal thingamajig to hold it!

Chaplin May Play Mute In New Talking Picture

Hollywood, Calif., May 28 (A.P.).—Pola Negri, former fiancee of Charles Chaplin, said today the noted screen comedian might appear in a talking picture, but if so, it would be in the role of a deaf mute.

Richardson Is Elected By Antisaloon Group

Richmond, Va., May 28 (A.P.).—The Rev. Edward J. Richardson, of the educational department of the Antisaloon League of America, today was elected superintendent of the Virginia Antisaloon League to succeed the late Rev. David Hepburn.

Dr. Reichelderfer Plans Short Vacation in Paris

Dr. Luther H. Reichelderfer, chairman of the Board of District Commissioners, plans to sail Sunday for Paris, France, on a vacation trip, he said yesterday. He will return to Washington on July 10.

Corporation Counsel William W. Bride will make a European tour in about two weeks.

Post. Mail as many in one envelope as you can. This contest is open to amateurs only, and every one has an equal chance of winning, whether you are starting today to write ads or have written since the beginning of the contest. The idea is what counts, not layout artwork, punctuation or grammar. All you need to do is write one ad on a single piece of paper, put your name, address and telephone number on the back and the return address on the envelope if you mail them. You can also bring them in person to The Post.

You have a glorious opportunity to be the winner of that $1,000 grand prize. It would be well worth-while spending these last two days doing nothing but writing ads. That last idea you express in ad form may be the one in the eyes of the judges to be the winner. No matter how poor you may think your ads are, send them in and let the judges do the judging. That very one you think is the poorest may be the one to capture that $1,000 drawn on the Federal American National Bank & Trust Co. for you.

If you think you haven't a chance to win work that much harder, send in more ads and when the day of judging comes you may get the greatest surprise of your life. It is all up to you. If you really want that grand prize you will give yourself every chance to win by writing lots of ads in the two days left.

Everybody ready—let's go! Don't let a thing stop you. The $1,000 check is waiting for the winner. Is it going to be your name that appears on the face of it? You know the secret of winning it. Now get busy.

JEWISH EDUCATION GROUPS ORGANIZE

Coordination of Orthodox Institutions Is Plan of Association.

Representatives of practically every orthodox Jewish educational and religious organization in the city have participated in the formation of the Jewish Education Association, a federation to coordinate all local orthodox Jewish educational institutions.

The project, regarded as an important episode in the history of Washington Jewry, was launched as the result of a long-felt need for such a movement. Jewish congregational schools previously have been separately operated and maintained.

Officers of the new organization were elected as follows: Bernard Danzansky, president; Samuel Freedman, M. Garfinkle, L. Mirman and Nathan Plotnick, vice presidents; Alex Koplin, secretary; Jacob M. Schaffer, assistant secretary, and Paul Himmelfarb, treasurer. Committees on curricula, organization, location, propaganda, publicity and budget were appointed.

Rabbis of all the leading orthodox synagogues expressed hearty indorsement of the organization in addresses before the gathering. Mr. Danzansky, outlining plans of the organization, said that insofar as possible few changes would be made in personnel and locations of existing institutions.

YEARS OF GRACE

By MARGARET AYER BARNES

SYNOPSIS.

Andre's letter proves a shock to Jane's romantic young dreams. He describes his life during their four years of separation, tells her he has won the Prix de Rome for his sculpture and is going to Italy to study for three years. He says he will try to come back to see her next spring. Jane is stunned with disappointment and disillusionment. She had waited four years for this! Swiftly she decides to marry Stephen, and writes Andre a letter telling him of her decision.

STEPHEN—CHAPTER VII.

JANE stood before her mirror, gazing incredulously through her snowy veil at the slim white reflection that was herself. Fancy dress, it seemed to her, this paraphernalia of bridal finery. Isabel stood at her side, holding her shower bouquet of lilies of the valley. Her mother was leaning against the bureau, looking her up and down and softly crying. Isabel's eyes were full of tears. Minnie, standing admiringly at the bedroom door, was pressing a mussy handkerchief to trembling lips.

After the past two weeks, however, Jane was quite accustomed to being cried over. She was a hero's bride, dedicated to a romantic destiny that had not left a dry eye in her little circle. Flora had cabled and Agnes and Marion had written her lovely letters.

Jane had been terribly afraid to meet Stephen's family. They had been very much surprised at the news of the engagement. But when they came, they proved to be very nice. They really didn't seem to bother about Jane at all. They were mainly preoccupied with Stephen's enlistment. The wedding was, in their eyes, a mere preliminary, a curtain raiser, to the great drama of the war. Jane was the leading lady, to be sure, but she played a conventional role. The hero's bride again, dedicated, this time, to the romantic destiny of making Stephen happy for a week before he went away to fight the Spaniards. Jane, facing the disquieting group of future relatives-in-law, was profoundly relieved that nothing more complicated was required of her.

Six of Them, Very Friendly.

There were six of them and all very friendly indeed. Except for their short, clipped accent and a certain funny something that they did, or rather did not do, to their r's, they might have been born and bred on Pine street. Stephen's mother, whom Jane had, of course, dreaded the most of all, proved to have a very reassuring resemblance to her brother, Mr. Furness. She was short and plump, with the same pale, protruding eyes and iron gray hair. Stephen's father, Mr. Alden Carver, was a very impressive gentleman. He was gray-haired, too, and he had a close-clipped gray Vandyke beard and mustache, and shrewd light-blue eyes that peered out from under his gray eyebrows with an uncanny resemblance to Stephen's.

Alden Carver, jr., looked just like his mother. He was four years older than Stephen and he had never married.

Stephen's sister, Silly, was easier to talk to. She talked a great deal herself and always amusingly, about horses and dogs and sailboats. Silly's real name was Cicily, after Stephen's mother. She was older than Stephen, but younger than Alden. Silly was 31 and Jane had never met any other girl just like her. Silly, it seemed, kept a cocker-spaniel kennel and hunted with the Myopia hounds and sailed a catboat at the Seaconsit races. Jane had thought she was perfectly stunning when she saw her get off the train in her blue serge suit and crisp white shirt waist and small black sailor. A perfect Gibson girl. Slim and distinguished. But that night at dinner on Pine street she had not looked nearly as well in evening dress. Somehow lank and mannish, in spite of blue taffeta, long-limbed and angular, and, yes, distinctly, old.

Aunt and Uncle Also There.

Stephen had an aunt, who had come too, with his uncle. The Stephen Carver for whom Stephen had been named. He was nice, Jane thought. He was a college professor in Cambridge. Jane knew she would like her Uncle Stephen. He got on famously with her father. It seemed that they had been at Harvard together. That fact seemed to help the bridal dinner a great deal.

Uncle Stephen's wife was Aunt Marie. She looked like the wives of all college professors, thought Jane. Nice and bright and friendly and not too careful about how she did her hair.

"Don't let them worry you," said Stephen very tenderly. "You won't have to live with them."

"They don't worry me," said Jane promptly. "I like them. I like your uncle a lot."

Stephen looked very much pleased. "Uncle Stephen's all right," he said warmly. "They're all all right, really, but I thought they seemed a little fishy this evening. A little of Alden will go a long way, of course."

"Your mother," said Jane hesitantly, "was very sweet to me."

"Mother's a dear," said Stephen, "when you get to know her. She's awfully domestic and rather shy."

Jane would never have thought of that for herself. Shyness, she reflected, was a very endearing trait in a mother-in-law.

"Really Love Me?" He Asks.

"I know I'll love her," said Jane. As she spoke Mrs. Carver and her mother appeared at the top of the stairs. They all trooped together to the front door. Stephen lingered a moment to say good-by to her in the vestibule. Jane smiled up at him, very calmly.

"Jane," said Stephen, a little wistfully, "do you really love me?"

"Of course I do," said Jane simply. That point, she felt, was settled at last. She was never going to worry about it any more. Stephen took her in his arms.

"Are you happy, Jane?" he asked.

"Except for the war," said Jane. He kissed her very gently, very unalarmingly. It was peaceful, thought Jane, to have all her dreadful indecision over forever.

But now, as Jane stood facing her slim white reflection in her mirror, she really couldn't realize that she was getting married. Where were the thoughts, she wondered, that she had always imagined such a portentous occasion would engender? Where were the thoughts, for instance, that she had had at Muriel's wedding? Jane felt she should have reserved them for her own. She stretched out her hand for her shower bouquet.

"Well, I'm ready," she said.

Isabel kissed her tenderly and turned to run downstairs to say that Jane was coming. Mrs. Ward, still crying, took her in her arms.

"Mamma," said Jane, smiling, "it isn't a funeral."

Jane Tries to Forget the War.

Mrs. Ward tried to dry her tears. "I want Minnie to see the ceremony," said Jane.

They all left the room together. At the head of the stairs Mr. Ward was waiting. He watched Jane's approach down the darkened corridor with a very tender smile. She slipped her hand through his arm. Jane's mother went down the stairs, followed by Minnie.

"Kid," said Mr. Ward, "you look perfectly lovely."

Jane smiled up at him through the tulle.

"Kid," said Mr. Ward again, "it will be a naval war. I doubt if the land forces ever reach Cuba. Cervera will blockade the ports."

Jane smiled again, this time a little tremulously. She was trying to forget the war.

The little stringed orchestra under the stairs struck up the Lohengrin wedding march. Jane was glad she wasn't going to be married to those doomful premonitory notes of an organ. The violins made even Lohengrin sound gay. She walked slowly down the stairs on her father's arm.

The library was filled with softly smiling, softly stirring people.

Stephen was standing with Alden, embowered in smilax, at the left hand of the clergyman, both fearfully correct in new frock coats and boutonnieres of lillies of the valley. Stephen looked very charming and serious and distinctly nervous. Jane smiled reassuringly up at him as she relinquished her father's arm. The music died away into silence.

"Dearly beloved brethren," began Dr. Winter.

Stephen So Young to Go to War.

Jane looked up, very calmly, at Stephen's set young profile. How young he was, she thought! How terribly young to be going to war! Her fingers tightened slightly on his broadcloth sleeve. He looked down at her and smiled reassuringly in his turn. She stared up into his eyes. She was marrying Stephen. Her father's voice aroused her. It was very clear and firm.

"I do," he said. Jane could hear him behind her, stepping back beside her mother. Then Dr. Winter took up his part, again, sonorously. Presently there was a barely perceptible pause in the familiar cadence of the ritual.

"I, Stephen, take thee, Jane," said Stephen hastily.

Jane felt herself smiling. She was sorry for Stephen. When her turn came she was quite collected.

"I, Jane, take thee, Stephen, for my wedded husband," the words were devoid of meaning. She could have said them all, unprompted by the clergyman. She had an odd sensation of playing a role. Dr. Winter was blessing the ring. They were putting it on her finger. Stephen was speaking again.

"With this ring I thee wed——" It stuck a bit, over the last knuckle. Stephen was still nervous. Dr. Winter had resumed. Suddenly the stringed orchestra swelled out into Mendelssohn. Jane's main feeling was that it had all been over in a moment—this ceremony that every one had been talking about for two weeks. Why—it was nothing. Stephen stooped to kiss her—a self-conscious little kiss—barely brushing her cheek. He became entangled in the tulle veil. Jane laughed up at him. She felt her mother's arms about her. Then she was looking up into her father's eyes.

"Be Happy," Father Says.

"Kid, be happy," he said, as he kissed her.

Every one was around her then. Stephen's mother was crying.

"Come cut the cake!" cried Isabel. Every one was kissed by now.

"Carry my train!" cried Jane to Stephen. She felt very light-hearted. He picked it up, laughing. He looked awfully happy. They led the crowd to the dining room. Minnie handed Jane the knife, festooned with white satin. Jane dug into the bride's cake, just under the sugar cupid. Every one was applauding. The orchestra in the hall was playing "The Stars and Stripes Forever." The groom's cake was decorated with a little silken flag.

Jane sank down in her mother's armchair at one end of the room. Stephen was standing beside her. People began to bring them food. She must go upstairs, soon, and change her dress. They were taking a 6 o'clock train. They were going up to the Dells, in northern Wisconsin. They had only a week before Stephen left for San Antonio. People were singing now. Alden had started "Fair Harvard." All the men, old and young, knew the words. The male chorus swelled out very bravely, the orchestra accompanying softly:

"Fair Harvard, thy sons to thy jubilee throng.
And with blessings surrender thee o'er.
By these festival rites from the age that is past
To the age that is waiting before—"

Toast to the Bride Is Drunk.

Uncle Stephen, red-faced and white-headed, arm in arm with her father, was singing loudest of all and a little off-key. It made Jane feel just a little choky to look at them. All Harvard men, she thought, every one except Freddy. Even Mr. Bert Lancaster. Freddy went to Yale. He was singing, though, very generously. The words were lovely, thought Jane, just as lovely as the air.

The song over, Stephen's father raised his champagne glass.

"A toast to the bride!" he cried. Every one drank it, cheering. When it was over Stephen crashed his goblet to the floor. Applause greeted the gallant gesture.

"I must go up," said Jane. Stephen squeezed her hand.

"I'll go with you," said Isabel. Hand in hand they ran up the stairs. Minnie was waiting in Jane's bedroom. The packed suitcase was lying on the bed.

"Stephen's magnificent," laughed Isabel, as she unhooked the wedding dress. Jane was removing the veil.

"I don't believe the Rough Riders will ever see action," said Isabel.

Jane stepped out of her wedding dress.

"Sit down," said Minnie gruffly. "I'll take off your slippers and stockings." Jane sank down on the chair overlooking the willow tree. She had never been waited on like that before.

Orchestra Starts "Dolly Gray."

Someone downstairs had ineptly started the orchestra on "Dollie Gray." Every one was singing it. Mrs. Ward appeared in the doorway.

"Nearly ready, Jane?" she asked.

Jane picked up her hat from the bed. It was a pretty hat, with a wreath of bachelor's buttons around it.

"In a minute," said Jane, facing the mirror again. "It was a lovely wedding, mama."

"I thought so," said Mrs. Ward a little tremulously. Jane heard tears in her voice. Jane was determined to fight off sentiment.

"Mama," she said quickly, "I'll be back in a week."

That simple statement didn't seem to make things any better.

"Jane dear," said Mrs. Ward, "I can't bear it—"

Mr. Ward appeared in the doorway. "Mr. Carver, your husband is waiting for you," he said. Jane was very grateful for his twinkle.

"It won't be the last time he'll wait for me!" she laughed. She caught up her coat and kissed Isabel.

"I'll take down the suitcase," said Isabel. She left the room. Mrs. Ward took Jane in her arms.

"My child——" she began, with emotion. Jane stopped her with a kiss.

Stephen Waiting in the Hall.

"Good-by, Minnie," she said lightly. At the door her father slipped his arm around her. She stood looking up at him. Her—father. Jane was suddenly overcome with a sense of what she was doing. She was leaving home—forever.

"Papa," she said brokenly, "Papa you've always——" She couldn't say it.

Mr. Ward patted her back.

"Good luck, Kid," he said huskily. She gave him a tremendous hug.

Stephen was waiting in the upper hall. Jane took his arm. There was no time to speak to him. Every one was pressing around the foot of the staircase. Alden was leading the band. As Stephen appeared it struck up "Hail, the Conquering Hero Comes."

Fear of Sentiment Returns.

The mild May air was very refreshing, after the crowded rooms. Jane took a great breath of it as they rushed down the steps, past the crowd by the awning. The wedding guests came running after them. Rice still flew. Jane gained the shelter of the waiting brougham. Stephen flung himself after her and banged the door. The brougham started smartly into motion.

"Jane!" said Stephen, and suddenly his arms were around her. "Jane," he said again, very solemnly, "we're married." Jane felt again that frightful fear of sentiment. Couldn't—couldn't people take weddings—calmly? She smiled, a little shkily, into Stephen's eyes. Suddenly his arms grew stronger and strangely urgent. He pulled her to him roughly, abruptly.

"Stephen!" cried Jane, in consternation. His eyes were smiling, excitedly, straight into her own. Jane fell a sudden prey to panic. "Stephen," she said quickly—"don't—please—don't."

His face changed then, perplexedly. It grew strangely wistful.

"I—I won't, Jane," he said very gently. His arms relaxed their hold.

She Feels Suddenly Contrite.

Jane felt suddenly contrite. And somehow—inadequate. She felt she was failing Stephen. Stephen, whom she had married, who would have only a week with her, who was going to war. Deliberately she put her arms around him.

"Stephen, truly I love you," she said. Stephen's lips met hers. Dear Stephen! She did love him. She would love him. She had married him. That point was settled. The brougham rolled on up Erie street.

* * * * *

The midsummer willow stood motionless in the late August sunshine, not a gray-green leaf stirring, and Jane was sitting at her window looking out at it and thinking of Stephen, when Andre's second letter arrived.

Minnie brought it up to her immediately after the postman's ring. No one could do too much for Jane now. Jane saw the Italian stamp, the strange transparent paper, before she took it from Minnie's considerate hand. She had a queer revulsion of feeling the moment she recognized it. An impulse to cast it from her, unread. Jane didn't want to hear from Andre. She didn't want to hear anything he might have to say.

Glad to See It Was Brief.

When Minnie had left the room, however, she opened it very thoughtfully. After all—it couldn't make any difference. She was glad to see that it was very brief.

"Dear Jane: I was terribly surprised and terribly shocked at the news your letter contained. Why, I don't know. I was always afraid, all these past four years, that I would hear that you were going to marry. I haven't counted, though, on just what the sight of my name on an envelope in your handwriting would do to me. I haven't felt ready to answer until just now.

"I hope, awfully, that you will be very happy; that you're happy now. But I won't plan to come to the States, I know I don't want to meet your husband next spring, and I think I don't want to meet you, Jane, ever again. You mean a very special thing to me. No one will ever take your place. But I won't come to Chicago. Feeling as I do, I should really have nothing to say to you. 'Il faut qu'une porte soit ouverte ou fermee.'

"ANDRE."

Glad She Wouldn't Have to See Him.

Well, thought Jane, that was that. But why did he have to write just as he did? Jane frowned over her instant recognition of the pluck the brief note had given to her heart strings. It was unforgettable, like everything else about Andre.

Jane put it away with his other letter in her desk drawer. She was terribly glad that she would not have to see him. She didn't want to see Andre, ever again. He shouldn't have mentioned it, of course, but he was quite right about doors.

A great deal of water had run under the bridge since the April afternoon when his first letter had arrived. Stephen, an authentic hero, had charged up San Juan Hill, following the waving sombrero of Theodore Roosevelt. He was recovering from malarial fever, now, down at Montauk Point. The war was over, Cuba was free. The United States owned the Philippine Islands. Boston had not been bombarded. And Jane had known, for more than three months, that she was going to have a baby in February.

HOW IT BEGAN

By Russ Murphy and Ray Sernusky

"PHILIP DRUNK AND PHILIP SOBER"

THIS PHRASE ORIGINATED WITH THE STORY OF A WOMAN WHOM PHILIP OF MACEDON, WHILE INTOXICATED UNJUSTLY CONDEMNED. THE WOMAN ANNOUNCED SHE WOULD APPEAL THE CASE TO A BETTER JUDGE, "TO WHOM WILL YOU APPEAL," DEMANDED THE KING, "FROM PHILIP DRUNK AND SLUMBERING, TO PHILIP SOBER AND WAKEFUL."

TROPHY

"TROPHESS" OR TROPHY MONEY WAS A DUTY OF FOURPENCE PAID ANNUALLY BY LANDLORDS FOR THE DRUMS, COLORS, PRIZES ETC. FOR THEIR RESPECTIVE COMPANIES OF LOCAL MILITIA. LATER WHEN BANNERS, CUPS AND OTHER ARTICLES WERE DONATED TO WINNERS OF ATHLETIC EVENTS DONORS CALLED THEM TROPHIES.

SAFETY IS THE FIRST CONSIDERATION

SAFETY FIRST

TWENTY YEARS AGO, THE BUREAU OF MINES WAS MAKING A SAFETY DEMONSTRATION. THEY WANTED TO USE A BANNER WITH THE SLOGAN "SAFETY IS THE FIRST CONSIDERATION." NOT HAVING ROOM FOR SO LONG A BANNER, SOMEONE CHANGED THE SLOGAN TO "SAFETY FIRST" AND THE NEW SLOGAN BECAME SO POPULAR THAT IT SPREAD ALL OVER THE COUNTRY.

TOMORROW—"The Die Is Cast;" How "Nugget" Originated; Thin as Banbury Cheese.

If you have other ideas as to HOW IT BEGAN, write to Russ Murphy, care of The Washington Post. If you want to see how some other particular custom or saying began, let Russ Murphy know and his answer will be illustrated in this series.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. W. A. EVANS

To the limit of space questions pertaining to hygiene and prevention of disease will be answered in this column. Personal replies will be made to inquiries, under proper limitations, when return stamped envelope is inclosed. Dr. Evans will not make diagnosis or prescribe for individual disease.

BREAKING THE DRUG HABIT.

DR. ALEX LAMBERT gives the following as the best method to get a morphine addict away from his habit. This is the conclusion of a long, careful and extensive study made by the mayor's commission of New York City.

First, they find out the daily dose of morphine used by the addict. They then cut this off by gradual reduction extending over a ten-day period. Let us say he was taking ten grains daily. They give nine grains the first day, eight the second, and one grain less each day until the drug has been withdrawn. On the second day of treatment they give one-half grain of codein every four hours to quiet the withdrawal symptoms.

The dose of codein on the second day of its use is one grain every four hours. After that the dose of codein is increased one grain until it reaches five grains. From then on, five grains are given every four hours. This is continued until three days after the last dose of morphine was given. Then begins the process of getting rid of the codein by a method of reduction or tapering off. By the end of three to seven days the dose of codein is reduced to the vanishing point. It is then stopped.

During the treatment laxatives are given if necessary, and there may be some treatment to meet the symptoms. This treatment requires about three weeks from the time when the first dose of morphine to the time when no more codein is given. There should be very little restlessness and no pain and few of the others symptoms of withdrawal.

There then comes the problem of building up the patient's appetite and strength and increasing his weight. Subsequent to that comes the far more difficult and serious problem of building up character and stamina.

Most addicts are such because they have what is called inadequate personalities. Some of them have developed positive vices, largely because they needed money or had other difficult situations to meet. To cure a man of his habit by stopping his drug and cleaning his system of the dregs and then stopping is generally not worth while. A little later he is back where you found him. A follow-up to build character is difficult, time consuming and may be disappointing.

PROBABLY MEAN LICE.

T. E. C. writes: Some sort of a paarsite has invaded our home. It infests the hair of the body. Would you kindly recommend a remedy for the extermination of this pest?

We have lived in the same house for 30 years and have never experienced the like. Is it possible that the laundry that we send out each week could be responsible? We have used oil of anise and larkspur, but they always return. They are white and about the size of a grain of sugar. They cause a great discomfort and annoyance.

REPLY.

I judge you mean members of your family have lice. The first step in getting rid of lice is to face the facts. Lice are "caught" from associates and are "spread" to associates.

The second step is to change, or somehow improve, one's associates.

The third is to get rid of the insects.

The adults are killed by kerosene in a few minutes.

The eggs are best treated with warm vinegar, followed by the use of a fine tooth comb and grease.

The insects may take refuge in the clothing while the process of cleaning is going on. The body louse lives in the clothing and goes on the body only to feed.

Electricity Replaces Oil Lamp.

Tubac, Ariz., May 28 (U.P.)—This border town of 500 inhabitants, founded by the Spaniards before the American Revolution, has gone modern by replacing oil lamps with electric lights. Bringing the "juice" to Tubac was observed by a community celebration.

KUHEL'S HOMER FEATURES NATS' 4-3 WIN AT BOSTON; SHIELDS AND WOOD GIVE U. S. 2-0 LEAD OVER ARGENTINA

This MORNING with SHIRLEY L. POVICH

GOTHAM'S promotorial war in which Primo Carnera is the boner of contention prompts this column to inquire what all the shooting's about. The Garden went to court to restrain the Primo from fighting Jack Sharkey for the Ebbetts Field interests and succeeded. An appeal has been noted and the battle may not get out of the courts this summer.

Both the Garden and Jimmy Johnston, Ebbetts Field matchmaker, are attempting to shoo the Primo into a championship battle outdoors but they were probably pained to learn of the occurrence in Boston last Tuesday evening when Ernie Schaaf knocked Jimmy Maloney flat and out in the first round.

Maloney is the Dorchester fish peddler who was knocked out twice by Jack Sharkey several years ago and he is the same lad who walloped out a decision over Carnera at Boston during the world series time last year. Schaaf is rated just among the second flight of our heavyweights which would make Carnera's standing in the fistic firmament about as high as a Singer midget with an inferiority complex.

Tommy Longnecker

It was in the fall of 1929 that Dartmouth was headed toward its first victory in history in Yale Bowl with Al Marsters carrying on in a last great effort for the Big Green of Hanover and by dint of his gallops, over the turf that had never seen a Dartmouth victory inscribed thereon, had staked his team to a 12-10 lead over Yale in a ball-carrying duel with Albie Booth.

Marsters went out of the game in the last quarter with a spine injury that halted his football career. Coach Jackson Cannell sent Tommy Longnecker into the line-up as substitute quarter back. The shadows were closing fast over the great arena. Then came the break. Dartmouth had the ball on Yale's 15-yard line and was headed for a third touchdown. In his zeal Longnecker violated every precept of intelligent quarter-back play at that stage of the game. He tossed a forward pass and it never reached the arms of the Dartmouth end. Hoot Ellis, tearing over from his defensive backfield post, snatched the ball out of the air at top speed and flashed down the field for the touchdown that won the game for Yale and dashed Dartmouth's hopes for a victory in the bowl.

The story's a little out of season perhaps, but little Tommy Longnecker was killed in an automobile accident in Toledo the other day and the news didn't even reach the sports pages where he had been given columns for his unhappy mistake.

About Earl Webb

A great bulk of a man, Earl Webb, Louisville product, stepped into one of Alvin Crowder's pitches in the second inning of last Sunday's game here between the Nats and the Red Sox and bounced a rollicking home run into the upper reaches of the bleachers in left center field.

Thta was the start of a magnificent batting rampage by Webb against the Nats in the five-game series concluded by the two clubs yesterday. That day he also hit a double. On Tuesday at Boston he hit two doubles. On Wednesday in the double-header he hit four doubles and a triple. Yesterday, in three appearances at the plate, he slammed another home run. He hit .500 during the series.

Webb has hit 22 doubles in the Red Sox's 35 games this season. The American League record, held by George Burns while with Cleveland, is 64. At his present pace, Webb would hit 96 doubles over the regulation 154 games.

All this is very interesting to Washington fans. The wail of Manager Johnson and President Griffith for the past three seasons has been the lack of a right-handed hitting outfielder. Webb bats right-handed, and it seems that the Nats had title to him for a few fleeting moments last year on waivers from the Chicago Cubs, but didn't deem him good enough to rate a trial. He was sent to the Red Sox in exchange for Bob Barrett, long since sent down river. There is some mistake.

Tennis fans, and even those lured to the scene by the candle of its social background, must needs be equipped with memories of no great cohesiveness if they today, tomorrow, or a year from now can not command to their mind's eye the sight of Sidney Wood as he contrived to defeat Boyd yesterday afternoon. It can not be said that Wood stroked his shots; he hurled his frame into the path of the Argentinian's drives and annihilated that innocent mixture of compressed air and rubber and felt which has taken on such international clothing.

Especially was this annihilation true in speaking of the way in which the buck-toothed, cheery-faced scion of a long line of tennis players dealt with the top-spin serves of the South American. He hit nearly all of them shoulder high, after a quick, whiplike backswing accomplished while his body was in the air advancing on the advancing ball. Cross-court, or down the line, it made no difference to Wood, who drove 26 placements to Boyd's 2.

Wood Not Pressed In First Set.

Wood was not unduly pressed to take the first set, although it went to him only at 6—4. Boyd early showed signs of failing to live up to the form he showed in practice by netting and outing shots which might well have given him a substantial lead, while Wood was sounding first this and then that part of his own game. Boyd tied the score at 2-2 after bearing down a game when Wood double-faulted twice.

Boyd went to 3—2 on his own service and then threatened Wood's with a beautiful backhand drive, but wilted under the American's subsequent serves and generally improved game.

There was not a great deal to the match after that. Wood simply was 6—2, 6—2 better than Boyd. He had every stroke, and in the authentic words of Capt. Prentice was one of the three greatest tennis players in the world yesterday. His Eastern grips swept the ball low and hard and at angles which Boyd, with all his speed, could find no rejoinder. Wood covered the court like he does the clay, went out after his man and got him as soon as possible.

Robson Starts Well Against Shields.

It took Shields a set to introduce his dogged stroking to the exigencies proffered by Willy Robson. The Argentinan, suave, sleek and only now showing a let-down from what was once a great athlete, knew the things to do against his younger opponent, and went out and did just those things.

Looping his backhand and making use of a sliding forehand chop, Robson cast almost a pall over the effusive American rooters in the first set by consistently holding an advantage born of a break through Shields' deadly service in the important seventh game, with the score

Reds Conquer Cubs On Hornsby's Error

Cincinnati, Ohio, May 28 (A.P.).—Young Johnson limited the Cubs to 5 hits today and enabled the Reds to win the final game of the series, 3 to 1. It was the first time this year Cincinnati defeated Chicago. Johnson also being the one to pitch the Reds to their first win of the season over the Cardinals last Sunday.

Hornsby's error on Roush's roller in the third inning let in what proved to be the winning run.

Phillips' Homer, 3 On, Beats Cardinals, 11-8

St. Louis, Mo., May 28 (A.P.).—Any hopes St. Louis had of regaining top place in the National League after a day in second place were spoiled today when Phillips smashed out a home run with the bases loaded, and score tied to give Pittsburgh a 11-to-8 victory over the Cardinals in a seven-inning contest. The game was called to allow the Pirates to make train connections. P. Waner and Gelbert also knocked homers.

The Cardinals took the lead in the third inning, and held it until the visitors tied the score in the fifth. Phillips, besides his seventh-inning homer, batted out a three-base hit with the bases loaded.

JAPAN STAR CONQUERS VAN RYN

Lott Lone U. S. Hope; Helen Jacobs Bows to Betty Nuthall.

AUTEUIL, France, May 28 (A.P.).—George Lott, jr., young Davis Cup prospect, stood tonight as America's last remaining hope of averting a complete rout in the singles division of the French hard courts tennis championships.

Idle today, the Chicago star looked on as his two compatriots, John Van Ryn and Helen Jacobs, fell by the wayside and left it strictly up to him. Van Ryn went down before the soft-stroking Japanese Davis Cup player, Jiro Satoh, in five gruelling sets, 8—6, 1—6, 2—6, 6—4, 6—3, while Miss Jacobs was eliminated by Betty Nuthall, of England, in two one-sided sets, 6—3, 6—2.

Elizabeth Ryan, the former Californian, survived another round in women's singles, but she has lived so long in England that she would provide only a hollow victory for America if she should win the title.

Lott Meets British Star Today.

Lott's quarter-final opponent tomorrow will be George Perry Hughes, young British star. Indications are that if the American disposes of Hughes he will encounter Christian Boussus, French left-hander, in the semifinals. Jean Borotra, France's ranking star in the tournament, reached the semifinals in the opposite half of the bracket today by defeating his countryman, Beni Berthet, 6—2, 6—3, 6—1.

Van Ryn made the mistake of setting a hot pace against his steady, methodical Japanese opponent today. After Satoh had won the long first set, Van Ryn came back with a burst of speed and brilliant tennis to win the second and third with ease. The efort cost him, however, as he appeared tired after the rest period and during the final set was utterly fatigued. Satoh, who had saved his resources, completely dominated the play toward the last, time and again forcing Van Ryn out of position and sending over sizzling placements.

Betty Nuthall Brilliant.

Betty Nuthall, England's leading woman star and champion of the United States, gave a dazzling exhibition in overwhelming Miss Jacobs, running out the two sets in only 35 minutes. While the California girl stuck close to the baseline, seldom venturing to the net, Miss Nuthall played a brilliant all-court game and for the most part dominated the play.

As a result of today's victory, the English girl became an outstanding favorite to win the women's singles title relinquished by Mrs. Helen Wills Moody, of the United States. In the semifinals she will encounter Hilda Krahwinkel, ranking German star, who provided an upset today by defeating Mme. Rene Mathieu, of France, 6—4, 6—3.

TAKOMA VS. ROCKVILLE.

The Takoma Tigers and Rockville A. C. will hookup in a game tomorrow at 3 p. m. on the latter's grounds. Both teams were strong rivals in the Capital City League last year and the Rockville aggregation will be out for the defeats handed them by the Tigers. Sunday the Tigers tackle Brooke Crubb's Howitzer Giants at 3p. m. on the Silver Spring Field.

Ravages of Golf Evident In Addict's Letter Replying To Pegler's Denunciation

By WESTBROOK PEGLER.
Special to The Washington Post.

NEW YORK, May 27.—Confirming my recent expose of golf, the mocker, I have received a letter from a particularly pathetic slave of this vice, written from the Monterey Peninsula Country Club, at Del Monte, Calif., defending the golf habit and unconsciously revealing the extent to which golf is allowed to interfere with the administration of justice there. It also shows that in cases of extreme addiction, the victim drifts off into a balmy state and intimates that this country is out of order in suggesting that Britain suppress the opium traffic until golf has been extinguished here.

The same unfortunate wrote to me last year in somewhat the same strain, but he is plainly more violent this year and is beginning to manifest a persecution complex. He thinks people are trying to have him put away, which might not be a bad idea at that. Says he this time:

"I find you once again calumniating golf and ridiculing all those who play it, and recall that last year I was compelled to protest a similar attempt on your part to bring this noble game into disrepute. You retaliated in your unsportsmanlike maner by forwarding a copy of my letter to the Mayor of Monterey, requesting that steps be taken to lock me up in some public institution.

Friend Mayor Will Take No Steps.

"The mayor, however, being a friend of mine, informed me of this plot and assured me that he would take no steps to carry out your designs."

Here the victim begins to discuss his loved ones, a familiar symptom of advanced cases, saying, "Three of the loveliest women I know play golf and remain still lovely and unsullied. When I return from a round of the links I live over again every shot, so sincerely, so poignantly, that my wife can fathom from the expression of my face whether I am thinking at the particular moment of a long putt that found the hole or a pulled mashie shot that found a trap.

"I have known her to reconstruct a complete round of mine after observing the sequence of my facial expressions during an evening. In fact, she now asks me not to describe my rounds orally as she takes more pleasure in reconstructing them from my moods and expressions. She is able, in fact, to accomplish this and read a magazine at the same time. Her ability here must be discounted, however, by the fact that she has had the opportunity of developing it over a period of 10 or 12 years."

Unnecessary to Comment.

It will not be necessary to comment on the gentle tact and ingenuity of the lady in thus obviating the boredom of hundreds of blow-by-blow post-mortems by a husband so far gone in the evil that he can not remember whether he has been married ten years or twelve. Perhaps the lady will give her system to a world of other wives similarly afflicted, who may wish to read magazines, too.

"I have in my office a man claiming to be a lineal descendant of Thomas Jefferson, an entry in 'Who's Who,' who refuses to play golf," the letter continues. "His fatuous argument is that Jefferson did not play golf, hence became a great man. During a long time I have watched this man's decay. Morally, he has sunk so low that he will take the weekly opportunity offered by his employer for exercise to repair to his home where he lies down on a couch and goes to sleep until the bell is rung for dinner.

"He varies that program only to observe the fermentation of a barrel of something in his cellar. His girth increases and the riding club has asked him not to ride its horses any more as he has foundered two and mashed another. Yet this monster detests golf, and I have known him to rush on a golf course and stamp a ball into the ground before the owner had come over the hill, so that he might delight in the player's agonized attempts to extricate his ball. When he read your vaporings against golf he said he wished he were a millionaire if only to be able to pay you the income from the million to conduct a propaganda against golf.

Mayor Himself Is Golfer.

"Let me say it matters not a whit whether you inform the Mayor of Monterey or the world at large of my efforts to defeat your purpose. The mayor, who is also the chief of police, is himself a golfer and has been known to keep a jury closeted five days while he fought his gallant way through the sixth flight of a tournament. If he emerges with a modest cup, it matters little to him if the jury emerges somewhat the worse for wear."

If the Mayor of Monterey is one himself there is no point in writing to him. But I gather that Del Monte is a community entirely composed of golf victims. They stay where their vice is, so the danger to the rest of the community is negligible.

The Day's Cricket Runs Into Guineas.

Another correspondent corrects my recent remark that a tramp around the jolly English countryside is an economical form of sport. Patrick Rian Morrow writes: "I recall a little trip I made with an uncle from Gigglesworth to Bugglesdeen. The distance is a matter of only eight or nine pubs. Through my uncle's having forgotten his wallet and his proclivity for stopping off along the way to buy picture postcards, I reached Bugglesdeen a tidy bit in the hole. In fact, I don't remember reaching our destination at all.

"And surely you must know that the per capita expense of cricket is just as great as that of any of our American sports. Consider the item of flannel alone. When you realize that, owing to the extremely damp climate, all English trousers come well over the chest, it can be seen that the costume is no laughing matter. For gentlemen, six pounds eight and sixpence is the average cost; a trifle less for professionals.

"However, the heaviest expense of cricket is 5 o'clock tea. You have no idea of the number of cold hams, pigeon pies, pork pies, pasties, cold joints and so forth that are called for in a successful cricket match. And then there are the bottled goods, and sometimes even tea. All in all, a day's cricket will run into guineas."

Jahncke Expect Army and Navy To Revive Grid Clash Next Year

(Associated Press.)

ARMY and Navy officials expect conferences between West Point and Annapolis to be resumed soon in an efort to end the athletic breach between the two service Schools.

Several weeks ago officials of the two institutions met and talked over the situation. They were reported near a compromise at one time, but the discussion, as have many others since 1927, resulted in nothing tangible.

An address by Assistant Secretary Jahncke this week at a meeting of letter men of the Navay Academy, both midshipmen and graduates, has revived talk of reconciliation in naval circles.

Jahncke said he felt the game would be scheduled next year if it were left to a vote of the midshipmen and cadets, adding he believed the misunderstanding afects "something more important and far reaching than the question of eligibility rules for a football game."

President Hoover has taken the attitude that the schools should work out their own athletic problems, despite suggestions that he interfere. A number of congressmen have been active in an effort to end the disagreement.

The two elevens met last year in a post-season charity game which the Army won, 6-0.

Sox Score in First Innings But Nats Pound MacFayden.

Boston, Outhit, 12-6, Threatens Until Hadley Hurls.

By FRANK H. YOUNG
(Post Staff Correspondent).

BOSTON, May 28.—Joe Kuhel was "hot" at bat today and his home run proved to be the margin of the Nationals' 4 to 3 victory over the Red Sox this afternoon. It was Washington's third straight triumph of the four-game series with the Beaneaters and the Nats lengthened their second place margin to a game and a half over the Yankees.

Manager Johnson is trying to whip "General" Alvin Crowder into winning ways and started him on the hill today. Crowder performed quite well, but was not impressive and he finally was excused after Ruel had opened the home seventh with a single and Irving Hadley relieved him and pitched hitless ball over the remainder of the route.

Danny MacFayden, who opposed the "General" in Washington Sunday when Crowder earned the only other victory credited him this season, went the route for the Sox, but he had his troubles in three frames, during which the Nats did all of their scoring, while they seriously threatened in one other.

Crowder Makes Shaky Start.

The Sox started as if they would make short work of Crowder and the Nats, scoring a run each in the first two innings, but "General" stuck to his task and the only other Boston tally came when Webb, a southpaw hitter, poled one over the fence in left center, a real clout, in the sixth.

Rhyne opened the game with a lusty triple to left center and scored after the catch of Rothrock's long fly to Manush. Two were out when the damage was done in the second. Then Oliver singled and Ruel doubled him home. With two down in the fifth, Crowder walked two in a row and was on the verge of retirement, but he prolonged his tenure on the mound by forcing Van Camp to loft to West.

Webb opened the sixth with a home run and the Sox never threatened thereafter, although a double play, following a walk in the eighth, came in quite handily.

A double by Sam Rice went for naught in the first inning and it was not until round 3 that the Nats could break into the scoring column. This run was made from Crowder's single, a force play and one-baggers by Sam Rice and Manush. Much to the ladies day crowd's delight, MacFayden fanned Cronin ending this round.

Kuhel Comes Through With Homer.

Kuhel propelled his home run against the foul marker in the right field stands with none on in the fourth to tie the score and the next frame saw the Nats' two-run rally which was large enough to give them victory. The blows which propelled the runners home came after two were out.

Crowder and Myer singled and the former was forced at third on Sam Rice's attempted sacrifice. It looked as if these blows might be wasted when Manush's best was a fly to center, but first Cronin and then West came through with singles, each of which scored a run.

The Nationals outhit the enemy, 12 to 6, with Sam Rice, West, Kuhel and Crowder getting two safeties each, the first-sacker tripling in addition to poking out his round-tripper. Rhyne and Ruel, with two hits apiece, accounted for two-thirds of the Boston attack.

NATS RETURN FOR HOLIDAY TWIN BILL

Burke to Face Yanks in One of 2 Games Tomorrow.

Special to The Washington Post.

BOSTON, Mass., May 28.—With a record of 15 victories in their 25 games played since they left home on April 29, the Nationals entrained tonight for the Capital, where they open their first long home stay with a Memorial Day double-header with the Yankees Saturday, the first game starting at 1:30 o'clock.

Bob Burke has done so well in relief roles of late that he will toil in one of the games against the Yankees, with "Sad Sam" Jones, who generally is effective against the New Yorkers, working in the other.

Comedians Altrock and Schacht are not making the trip home with their team, as they will clown at Buffalo tomorrow night, celebrating the Bisons' first 1931 game under the arc lights. Both will be on hand to entertain at Saturday's double-header, however.

Heinie Manush reported a stomach ache in the Nats' fifth and gave way afield to Harry Rice.

Catcher "Pinky" Hargrave this morning received tidings from Fort Wayne that burglars visited his home yesterday and made quite a clean-up.

"Shano" Collins, Red Sox manager, is doing considerable experimenting. Today he brought Al Van Camp in from left and gave him the first base assignment in place of Bill Sweeney, who is in a slump. Gene Rye, the rookie who hit three homers in one inning in the Texas League last season, went to left. He went hitless.

Kuhel's homer in the fourth, which knotted the string at 2-all, hit the white-painted iron pipe marking the foul line in right field and bounded back on the field. It was the first time this has happened in the memory of any of the oldest inhabitants. Joe had to pull up at third, but Umpire Dick Nallin beckoned to him to come on home. This pipe is on the other side of the fence guarding the stands and thus is out of bounds, making the ball technically fair.

Rothrock made a great stop and peg to nail Bluege on a topped roller ending the fifth. The hit and run was on, with West on first at the time. Rothrock first started toward second and then just managed to hustle back in time to make the play.

MacFayden did the unexpected when he sacrificed Ruel along with two strikes called on him in the seventh. After he had failed on two attempts the Nat infielders backed up, looking for him to try to hit, but

Chisox's Big Inning Defeats Tigers, 3-2

Chicago, May 28 (A.P.).—One big inning, the third, when they bunched four of their ten hits, gave the Chicago White Sox a victory over Detroit today, 3 to 2, and the series, three games to one.

All the Sox runs came in this one frame off Vic Sorrell.

Ted Lyons, in winning his second game of the year, gave but eight hits and was always in command of the situation. Harvey Walker and Bill Akers, with three hits each, were the only Tigers to have any luck against him.

MACK RALLY OVERCOMES YANKEES

Grove Finishes Game After Score Is Tied in 7th Inning.

PHILADELPHIA, May 28 (A.P.).—The Athletics made it five out of six for their series with the New York Yankees today by staging a ninth inning rally that brought a 5-to-4 victory in the final game.

Trailing up to the seventh, the champions tied it up by scoring three runs on as many hits and a pair of errors by Chapman and Gehrig.

Lefty Grove, who pitched the last two innings after relieving Walberg, started the ninth inning rally with a double. After the bases were filled, Al Simmons drove out a long fly and Grove scored the winning run after the catch. It was his seventh victory of the season.

Earl Combs and Simmons ran their hitting streaks to 27 and 26 games, respectively, while Babe Ruth and Jimmy Foxx clouted homers to make it eight apiece.

TRACK STARS AWAIT INTERCOLLEGIATE MEET TODAY

S. California Favored to Repeat

Wykoff, Tolan Duel in Century Anticipated; Finals Tomorrow.

Berlinger Entered in 4 Events; Carls Defends Hurdles Title.

PHILADELPHIA, May 28 (A.P.).—With Franklin Field closed to all athletes today while the cinder path and turf were being made ready for the annual intercollegiate meet which opens tomorrow, the wise men of the track and field game were figuring out the winners of the various events.

There was general agreement among them that Southern California, twice winner in succession of the Eastern classic, will repeat this year. Its team is expected to qualify enough men tomorrow to retain the championship on Saturday. They have in the team here 29¼ of the 44¼ points scored at Cambridge last year, and expect to pick up sufficient points to win.

Wykoff in Heats Today.

Frank Wykoff, of Southern California, who holds the record of 9 4-10 seconds for the hundred, will run in the heats tomorrow and attempt to qualify for Saturday's final. He is expected to measure strides in the final with Eddie Tolan, of the University of Michigan, who wants another chance to sprint against the Californian.

The decision for Ben Eastman to stay out of the quarter-mile event and put all his energy in the half-mile, still stood today. "Dink" Templeton, the Stanford coach, is not sure whether Eastman will come through in the 880 against the stars of the East. The long train ride from the West, he said, has always handicapped his middle distance runners.

Gene Record, of Harvard, is in condition to defend his 120-yard high hurdles championship, but he is expected to have plenty of competition from Clark, of Cornell; Smith and Nesbit, of Stanford, and Meisinger, of Pennsylvania State.

Carls to Defend His Title.

The low hurdle champion, Bill Carls, of Southern California, is also here to defend his title. Perhaps his toughest opponents will be Payne, a team-mate, and Record and Scarlett, of Princeton.

Barney Berlinger, Pennsylvania's all around star, is entered in four events—the shot put, the javelin throw, pole vault and broad jump. In the premeet gossip Berlinger was given a tie for first in the vault, and third in the javelin and a second in the shot put.

There will be trials in eleven events tomorrow beginning at 12 o'clock, Eastern standard time, with all finals on Saturday.

Alexandria Sports

ALEXANDRIA, Va., May 28.—Manager P. P. Clark, of the Del Ray Athletic Club, has scheduled two games for the Red Birds over the week-end. On Saturday the Del Rayans will entertain the Ballston A. C. at 3 o'clock on Edward Duncan's Field, while on Sunday the Palisades tossers from Washington will trek to the Virginian's diamond for a contest to begin at 2:30 o'clock.

Jeff Williams, coach of the locals, is enthused over the playing of his proteges in previous games. They have won six contests and lost one. The French A. C., of Washington, turned the trick.

Tonight, at 7:30 o'clock at club headquarters, an important meeting of all members of the club will be held, to make arrangements for the baseball campaign.

On Saturday afternoon at Haydon's Field, the Alpha Delta Omega and Columbia Fire Company tossers will hook up in the first local game of the season. This fray begins at 3 o'clock. Leon Riley will probably hurl for the Fraters, while Bradley, Simpson, or Snellings will be the Columbias' choice.

Manager Theodore Beach, of the Nation-Wide Store Team, has scheduled the Fredericksburg Pythians for a twin bill in the historic city on Saturday. It was announced that on Sunday the Nation-Wide boys will travel to Indianhead, Md., for a contest.

Charlie Corbett's St. Mary's Celtics will probably play out of town on Sunday. The Celtic's "magnate" is dickering with clubs in Richmond and Baltimore for a game. He hopes to be able to close with one team today.

The Gazette handicap golf tournament will be featured over the Belle Haven Country Club links on Saturday afternoon. Over 60 entries will take part in the competition. Handsome prizes will be awarded the winners.

Tom Ryan, golf professional, states the links will be in perfect condition for the event.

Boojum, Whitney Colt, To Be Sent to Stud

New York, May 28 (A.P.).—The Sun says Boojum, C. V. Whitney's 3-year-old colt which ran third to Hi-Jack and Judge Schilling at Belmont Park Monday in his first outing since the Futurity last year, is to be retired to the stud.

Boojum strained a tendon, the same one he injured in the Futurity, and Mr. Whitney decided it was hopeless to keep him in training. He will be taken to Mr. Whitney's Kentucky farm.

BRANDT WINS EIGHTH FOR BRAVES

Giants' Homers Fall Short of Tying; Score, 7-6.

NEW YORK, May 28 (A.P.).—Ed Brandt, star left-hander of the Boston Braves, hurled his eighth straight winning game today to give the Braves their first victory of the year in New York. The final count was 7 to 6. It was the third time Brandt had beaten the Giants this year.

Boston rolled up an early lead off Fred Fitzsimmons, scoring three runs in the second inning, and cut loose again when Donohue took the mound in the ninth. But home runs by Allen and Critz kept the Giants within striking distance, and a four-bagger by Lindstrom, with two on base, in the ninth left them just short of a tie.

Hyattsville High Nine Routs Western, 13-4

Hyattsville High's baseball team, which is preparing for competition in the State scholastic championship as the champion of Prince Georges County, walloped Western High of Washington, 13 to 4, yesterday afternoon in Magruder Park here. The victory enabled Hyattsville to even scores for a defeat handed it by Western a few weeks ago. It was Western's last game of the season.

After Western had gained a 2-0 lead Hyattsville came through with three runs in the third to take the lead, which it held. Hyattsville tallied seven runs in the fifth to put the game in the bag. Glasgow belted a double, to clear filled bases during this spurge.

Coleman Headley hit a homer in the seventh for Hyattsville with none on.

In all, 19 hits rattled off Hyattsville bats, while De Voe Meade and Francis Peffer were limiting Western to eight, Peffer, in the four innings he toiled, struck out seven and gave up only two hits.

Jack Sheriff, Hyattsville first baseman, bunted safely each of his four times at bat.

NATS FACE YANKS IN HOLIDAY BILL

he laid down a perfect bunt, Hadley throwing him out at first.

Kuhel tripled opening the sixth, but MacFayden put on the brakes and prevented a score by forcing the next three to go out on infield taps.

Myer raced almost to center to make a pretty overhead catch of Rhyne's looper in the "stretch" session.

As a result of a special meeting of the league, held in Cleveland Wednesday, American League pitchers may now use resin, and a little bag of it lay behind the mound today. It was not used by any of the flingers who toiled today.

Harry Rice singled in the eighth and showed rare speed in trying to stretch it into a double, as it was only a Texas leaguer to center. From the press box it looked as though he reached second safely, but Umpire Owens did not see things that way.

LATEST THING IN TENNIS GARB

Here's the newest style for tennis players. Or for the beach, if you prefer. It is a pajama outfit made of bright-colored Turkish toweling. It's being worn here by Laura LaPlante.

OHIO STATE, G. U. CLASH TODAY

Fester, Buckeye Star, Here With Visiting Baseball Team.

INTERSECTIONAL baseball, of which local fandom seldoms gets a taste, will be dished out this afternoon when Georgetown and Ohio State clash at 3:30 o'clock on the Reservoir road diamond. It is the seventeenth and final game of the season for Georgetown.

Occupying the feature pregame role is one of the Buckeyes, Wesley Fesler, who ranks high among the greatest all-around athletes in college today. Fesler is finishing his career with Ohio State and during the current baseball season has added greatly to his long list of notable achievements.

In a recent Western Conference game, Fesler hit three home runs, two with the bases loaded, and added as pair of doubles in five trips to the plate. His day's work at bat accounted directly for nine runs, just one less than the Ohio State total.

Poole Ends Athletic Career Here.

The game marks the end of the career of Harold Poole, right-handed pitcher, who has starred on the mound of Georgetown for three years. Poole, who has won seven of his eleven starts this year, hopes to keep Fesler's bat silent. Other Georgetown players to whom the game means finis are Capt. Johnny Scalzi, second baseman; Walter Morris, a Washington product who plays shortstop; Bob Wholey and Johnny Bozek, outfielders, and Larry O'Toole, catcher.

Ohio State tomorrow journeys to Annapolis to engage Navy in the final game for both clubs.

Western High Riflists Take National Prizes

The rifle team of Western High School, Washington, was announced today as the winner of two trophies in the junior division of the National Rifle Association. One trophy is a special prize awarded by the rifle association for high aggregate score in A division for the three series of matches, five matches in each series. The other trophy was for high score in the third and last series in the A division.

The final figures, as announced by H. H. Goebel, manager of the rifle association's junior division, show that Western rolled up a total of 3,930 points for the three series and 1,290 points in the third series.

The Western High girls' team had a total of 510 points for the third series, beating by 90 points the total of Watertown, S. Dak., High girls, the only other girls team whose shooting ability qualified it to fire in the A division.

standing 3—3. He held his own service easily to lead 5—3 and then ran out the set by breaking through the American's in a beautifully played deuce game. The final point caught Shields at his very feet as he raced anxiously in to cut off the wierdly bouncing shots of the invader.

Shields Decreases Temp of Game.

A rather extraordinary change came over each player at the start of the second set. Shields, who is generally conceded to be a free hitter, pure and simple, decreased the tempo of his game and actually succeeded in deluding Robson into overhitting. Like the other side of a mirror the picture changed. Now it was Robson who was making the fatal errors, while Shields' giant brown muscles, working under his skin almost like the tappets of an idling motor, hung back and waited for a chance to strike like a bolt of the "Old Marster's" kilowatts.

Shields was devastating overhead. He pulled down the almost perfect lobs of Robson and replied with socks which threatened to wear trenches along the sidelines. He was potent, particularly, in his high backhand volleys, aided perceptively by the fact that Robson's heavy left shot cleared the net by a comfortable yard or two

Robson Barely Deflects Match-Point Ball.

The end found Shields so engaged with his new-found tactics blended of patience and riotous hitting that he did not know the match was over. At match-point he served a tremendously hard ball, which Robson just managed to deflect off toward the boxes. Shields walked back to serve in the opposite court, and only the stentorian announcement of the victory, from the lips of Umpire Arthur Hellen, brought him to the net to shake the hand of his smiling opponent and to speak the traditional piece all tennis victors recite:

"You were way off, old man."

STOCK SALES MARK GAIN IN CONFIDENCE

Stronger Tone Holds Losses in Check, While Some Issues Advance.

New York, May 28 (A.P.).—Whether the support came from short covering or from stronger sources, stocks held their heads up with more confidence today. There were periods of softness in certain issues but by and large the buying was more substantial than the selling. Sales approximated 2,100,000 shares.

United States Steel common and New York Central behaved erratically. The former dropped 2 points to the new low of 90⅜ in the morning, rose to 92⅞ and then sagged a point net at the close.

Central, whose April net railway operating income was about half of last year's, duplicated its previous minimum of 80¾, canceled the decline and then dipped in the late trading. Rock Island was also knocked down just before the closing gong. Union Pacific, however, closed a couple of points higher.

Western Union Rises.

Westinghouse was helped by news of a large order for the Pennsylvania's Eastern electrification program. Western Union hopped up nearly 4 points, American Telephone advanced more than 2 and American Can, Bethlehem, Consolidated Gas, Sears Roebuck, Eastman Kodak, Johns-Manville and U. S. Industrial Alcohol gained 1 to 3 net. Amusements, which initiated the rally, maintained most of their improvement. Baldwin Locomotive was affected by omission of the semiannual dividend on the common. Lehman Corporation, an investment trust, lost 4 points. Standard Oil of New York dropped a point.

Nearly complete statistics on April railroad earnings reveal that the decline from a year ago greatly exceeded the drop in March, but with large crops in prospect many lines are expecting considerable improvement when the harvest starts to market. It is generally believed that an increase in freight rates, if eventually granted, can not become effective for some time.

First returns on the stock exchange's short selling questionnaire were due today and this fact may have prompted covering. The size of the bear interest is an open question. Although it is regarded as doubtful that the information obtained from the official inquiry will be made public, the market itself will doubtless tell the story. Member firms are required to submit, until further notice, a daily statement covering the position of their accounts.

Brokers Loans Decline.

Brokers loans dropped $57,000,000. It was the sixth consecutive weekly decline, but the interesting feature was the size of the decline. Trading has been relatively quiet in the past week and the shrinkage is unusually large for so dull a period. The market at present is close to a cash basis.

Money rates ignored the approach of the month-end settlements, and call loans were available unofficially at 1 per cent. Some large New York banks have decided not to lend at a concession from the stock exchange rate, but such action probably would have little effect since funds are in such large supply from other sources.

Dry weather in Kansas, a bullish Farm Board statement and a better export demand combined to push wheat prices up a cent. Corn's gains were from ⅜ to 1⅝, while cotton, recovering early decline, closed virtually unchanged.

The German mark steadied and sterling cables firmed, but the feature in foreign exchanges was provided by the Spanish peseta, which dropped 1-5 of a cent. The Bank of Spain plans to increase its circulation.

CHICAGO GRAIN.

Chicago, May 28 (A.P.).—Owing largely to nervousness over threatened big damage by drought in Canada, grains showed an irregular upward trend today. Wheat price advances derived a further stimulus from stock market rallies and from signs that North American export demand had improved. It was announced that only 10,000,000 bushels remained of 35,000,000 bushels which United States Government-sponsored organizations hoped to dispose of overseas before the new 1931 domestic crop started to move.

Wheat closed stronger, ¼-cent off to ⅝ to 1 up, corn ⅜ to 1⅛ higher, oats at ⅛ decline to ¼ advance, and provisions unchanged to 10 cents down.

Anxiety regarding Canadian drought conditions was intensified by the fact that only a few light showers were reported in the wheat provinces, and that rainless skies were in prospect. Winnipeg advices said drought in the Canadian spring wheat belt was now at a critical stage where developments in the next week or ten days would go far to determine the crop outcome. As a counterbalance for the prevailing severe shortage of moisture and to check widespread dust blowing, exceptionally heavy rains were needed at once, or crop deterioration was certain.

New No. 1 hard wheat for July shipment from the United States was reported bought by Holland at the equivalent of the Chicago September price. Simultaneously, Great Britain and European continental countries other than Holland took cash wheat and wheat from North America. It was noted that Russian wheat exports for the week, 352,000 bushels, were much smaller than a week ago. Contributing to bullish sentiment was a report by a Chicago crop authority just returned from an extensive observation trip Southwest and West that throughout large areas, stretching from the Texas Panhandle to Nebraska, wheat plants were depending mostly on surface moisture as a result of premature ageing of roots.

Corn went sharply higher owing to wheat strength and to unusual scarcity of corn offerings. Many stop loss buying orders were forced into execution on the advance. Chicago arrivals of corn amounted to only 90 cars, against 188 a year ago. Oats touched a new low price record for the season, but rallied with corn.

Provisions sagged, responsive to action of hog values. Lard outdid the season's previous bottom quotations.

21ST YEAR HONORED BY ANACOSTIA BANK

President Otterback Is Host to Employes and Wives at Dinner Dance.

By THOMAS M. CAHILL.

Officers and employes of Anacostia Bank celebrated the twenty-first year of that institution yesterday. A golf tournament between officers and employes was held in the afternoon at the Beaver Dam Country Club, and in the evening President Maurice Otterback of the Bank was host to employes and their wives at a dinner and dance at the club.

Resources of the bank at close of business December 31, 1930, were $1,662,831.68, while those at close of business Wednesday were $1,769,-209.95, a gain of more than $100,000 despite the depression.

Anacostia Bank, the interior of which is now being redecorated, had its inception in a drug store. In the summer of 1905 the late George O. Walson, afterward president of Liberty National Bank, then treasurer of Union Savings Bank, would station himself of evenings in the drug store of George B. Bury, at Nichols avenue and W streets southeast, to collect deposits for his institution.

Idea Grows With Bank.

His idea was so successful that a building was erected the next year to serve as the Anacostia branch of Union Savings Bank. President Otterback, then a note teller at National Capital Bank, became the branch manager. In 1910 the branch was chartered under Virginia laws as the People's Home Bank of Anacostia. It was then purchased from the Union Savings Bank and opened as an independent institution in May, 1910.

Mr. Walson was its first president. He retired in 1916 and was succeeded by Adolphus Gude. Mr. Gude, resigning in 1918, was succeeded by Mr. Otterback. The bank, which opened for business at 2021 Nichols avenue southeast, moved to its own building at 2000 Nichols avenue southeast in 1925.

The April statement of operation of Potomac Electric Power Co., filed yesterday with the Public Utilities Commission, shows net income of $376,824.99, a decline of $12,870.38 from the month a year ago. Net income for the first four months was $1,593,974.48, a decrease of $64,150.64 from this period in 1930.

Net Income Gains.

The statement of Washington Railway & Electric Co. for last month reveals net income of $85,330.19, a gain of $10,387.45 over the month last year. Net income for the four months totaled $588,406.49, an increase of $29,741.44 above the first four months last year.

June manufacturing schedule of Frigidaire household models has been raised 33 per cent in response to growing retail sales. This also represents a 33 per cent increase over the corresponding schedule for June, 1930.

Frigidaire May business continues encouraging following a 77 per cent increase in April retail sales of the household division. Total orders booked during that month were nearly double those for the three preceding months combined.

NEW YORK COTTON.

New York, May 28 (A.P.).—Rather nervous and irregular fluctuations occurred in cotton today. Early declines were followed by recoveries and the general market closed very steady net unchanged to 1 point lower.

The opening was steady, 6 to 12 points lower, in response to the easier cables and the favorable weather map. There seemed to be some foreign as well as local selling, but the steady offerings were quite readily absorbed by trade buying or covering, which was probably promoted by the approach of the holiday. Rallies of nearly yesterday's closing quotations followed, but offerings increased around 9.38 for July and 9.25 for January contracts and there appeared to be some foreign selling of the later months. They supplied the demand and sent prices off to 8.45 for July and 9.13 for January during the middle of the day, with active months generally showing net declines of 12 to 14 points. The new low prices seemed to attract an increased trade demand. This was coupled with considerable covering and there was probably some buying for a prebolidaY rally. Later fluctuations were somewhat irregular but the market closed well up to the best prices of the day with July quoted at 8.59 and January at 9.24.

Reports of mill-room markets probably contributed to the steadier undertone in cotton and the increase in the demand noted on the afternoon decline evidently encouraged spectacular sentiment. There was some July liquidation, but it was taken by shorts or the trade with closing quotations showing very little change in the differences. There appeared to be some foreign selling orders in the market here around 9.25 for January.

Liverpool cables reported continental selling absorbed by trade selling and covering in that market. A private crop report published here estimated a decrease of 9.3 per cent in acreage and said 80 per cent of the crop was chopped. Against 75 per cent last year. Exports today 13,342, making 8,007,097 so far this season. Port receipts 2,675. U. S. port stocks 3,281,220.

BOND PRICES SLUMP TO LOWER LEVELS

Wide Losses Are Recorded Among Foreign Loans; Chileans Gain.

New York, May 28 (A.P.).—Bonds were generally lower today, and a large number of new low prices for 1931 were established. High grade issues, as a rule, resisted the wave of selling pressure.

The slump was most apparent among railroad obligations, although many of the widest losses occurred in foreign issues. The Standard Statistics Associated Press average price for ten leading rail issues was 97.9, the lowest average this year, and the composite average for ten issues each of industrial, railroad and public utility bonds duplicated its low level at 93.9.

Such varied rail bonds as Baltimore & Ohio convertible 4½s of 1960, St. Paul 5s of 1975, Chicago & Northwestern series A 4¾s, Rock Island refunding 4s of 1934, Denver & Rio Grande consolidated 4s, Denver & Rio Grande Western 5s, Erie series A 4s, Illinois Central refunding 4s and 5s, New York, Chicago & St. Louis series C 4½s, both issues of New York Central 4½s of 2013 and 5s, and Pennsylvania debenture 4½s, hit new bottom levels.

Sharp gains in Chilean bonds tempered the slump in the foreign group, in which declines ranged from fractions to several points. Argentine issues wavered irregularly. New record low prices were established by such bonds as Silesian 7s, Rio Grande do Sul 7s of 1967, Rhine Westphalia 6s of 1955, Pernambuco 7s, Porto Alegre 7½s, Argentine 6s of October, 1960, and of February, 1961, Cauca Valley 7½s, Chile Mortgage Bank 6¾s, German 5½s, Finnish 6½s and Colombia Mortgage Bank 6½s.

Trading in United States Government issues was quiet all day. Only the Fourth Liberty 4¼s and the Treasury 3¾s of 1940-1943 had total sales in excess of $100,000 par value, on which they turned easy. Other Liberty and Treasury bonds were steady or higher.

The market in public utility and industrial obligations felt the selling pressure less than the other groups.

FRIDAY MORNING — The Washington Post. — MAY 29, 1931

NEWS OF LATEST HAPPENINGS IN MARYLAND AND VIRGINIA

CELEBRATIONS SET IN PRINCE GEORGES

Veterans' Group Planning to Meet in Bladensburg and Marlboro.

Veterans' organizations in Prince Georges County will hold two celebrations on Memorial Day, one at Marlboro and one at the Peace Cross in Bladensburg, both at 11 o'clock.

The Snyder-Farmer post of the American Legion will hold the Bladensburg services after a parade from Hyattsville, and the Strawn-Turner Post of the Veterans of Foreign Wars, assisted by the Capitol Heights Post of the American Legion, will be at the Marlboro ceremony.

Speakers at the Marlboro services, to be held at the Memorial Fountain, will include M. Hampton Magruder, attorney to the county commissioners, and Charles C. Marbury, member of the Maryland House of Delegates. Past Commander H. H. Rudolph, of the Strawn-Turner Post, will introduce the speakers and read the first memorial service order. The Rev. Theodore Entwhisle, of the Forestville Methodist Episcopal Church, will deliver the invocation.

The ritual service at Marlboro will be given by members of the American Legion and V. F. W. posts, assisted by the ladies' auxiliary of the latter group. After the speaking a wreath will be laid on the fountain, and Company K of the Twentieth Marines will present arms while "Taps" is sounded.

Music will be furnished by the Community Band of Capitol Heights, which will open the ceremonies with "America." Companies C and B of the Marines will be present as well as Company K, which is composed of residents of Capitol Heights. This group is headed by Capt. Thomas J. Luckett, with Lieuts. Julius H. Rice and Justian Shook.

The Hyattsville parade will start from the armory at 10 o'clock and proceed to the cross in Bladensburg. Richard N. Elliott, Assistant Comptroller of the United States and former representative from Indiana, will be the chief speaker, with George Henderson, American Legion department commander for Maryland, also on the program.

Other speakers will be Robert MacCartee, post commander, and Mrs. Jean Brown, president of the ladies' auxiliary. The Rev. Clyde Brown, of Pinkney Memorial Chapel, will deliver the invocation, while the Rev. Joseph Sullivan, of the Marish Seminary, will pronounce the benediction.

Included in the parade will be Spanish War and World War veterans, Company F of the Maryland National Guard and Boy and Girl Scouts. Music will be furnished by the National Training School for Boys Band. Fire departments from nearby towns are expected to parade, and Mount Rainier and Hyattsville town officials will also be in line.

The Marlboro Fire Department will mark the day by a pilgrimage to the grave of former Capt. B. Wesley Cranford, who was killed last fall when the fire truck overturned while responding to an alarm. The Rev. J. C. M. Shrewsbury, of Trinity Church, will deliver the invocation at the grave.

Choice of the First National Bank building to house the county offices in Hyattsville seemed assured following a public hearing on the question. Citizens of the town unanimously voiced their approval of the bank building.

After the hearing Walter M. Grimes, president of the board of commissioners, said that rental of the building would probably be authorized at a special board meeting Monday. A rental of $450 per month was set by T. Howard Duckett, but the actual cost to the county will be only about $150, not including light and heat. The rental will be reduced by subletting offices to the sanitary commission and the Park and Planning Commission, and by the saving of rental now paid for rental of police court and other quarters.

Remodeling, including extending the mezzanine floor all the way across, will cost about $10,000, and will be paid for by the Prince Georges Bank, which owns the property. The building will be leased for two years, so that the gross rental for this period will just about pay for the remodeling, Mr. Duckett pointed out.

The only dissenting voice to the selection was raised by Councilman T. D. Jarrell, of Hyattsville.

The Cheverly Citizens Association, through Fred W. Gast, new mayor of the town, has advised the commissioners that they favor the bank site for the county offices, also. The Hyattsville Chamber of Commerce and the Community Council have already gone on record as favoring this location.

Noble F. Rushe, chief of the Hyattsville Fire Department, is named in a petition for back payment of alimony filed by Mrs. Maude Rushe, and has been ordered to appear in Circuit Court on June 5.

Mrs. Rushe's petition says he has failed to pay the $20 per week alimony ordered by the court, and that he now owes her $280. He paid her $60 after the court's order was signed, she says, but faces a contempt charge for failing to keep up the payments.

Mrs. Rushe filed suit for divorce on ground of desertion last December, and the alimony order was signed by the court in January. Rushe was also ordered to pay $50 to his wife for counsel fees. Since this time, her bill claims, he has been employed by his father and she knows that he has received more than $30 per week.

The wife is represented by Attorneys J. Wilson Ryon and Albert R. Hassall. The bill states that Arthur C. Keefer, who was attorney for the man in the earlier litigation, "has no further interest in the matter."

A woman and two men were arrested yesterday when Federal dry agents raided a house near Clinton and seized 96 half-gallon jars of alleged whisky. Those arrested were Ruth Waters, William R. Waters and James P. Tippett.

The woman was charged with possession, and the men with both sale and possession. They were taken before J. Frank Parran, United States Commissioner, and released after they made bond.

Joseph Calvin Lloyd yesterday surrendered to police, who wanted him on a perjury charge, and was later released on bond of $200. The youth, who gave an address on Fifteenth street southeast near K street, is alleged to have made a false statement when getting a marriage license.

The warrant was sworn out by Mrs. Katherine Jenkins, the mother of Alice Loretta Randall, of Ninth street near K street southeast. According to the mother, when Lloyd and the girl applied to the clerk in Marlboro for a license, the young man said that the girl was 18, instead of 16. After Lloyd was released yesterday, it was indicated he would continue to live with his bride. The girl's mother accompanied the youth to Marlboro yesterday when he gave up.

An appeal was noted yesterday in Police Court against a fine of $1 placed against William Comphor on a charge of disorderly conduct, his attorney claiming that the laws of Capitol Heights are not competent, that the minimum fine for this offense is $5, and that the warrant is faulty.

According to Comphor's attorney, Thomas J. Luckett, the town ordinances are sealed with the town seal only on the first page, though every page should bear the imprint. Furthermore, he will present to the higher court that the warrant charges his client with "attempting to engage in a fight," but that the town ordinance forbids only "fighting." And, in addition, the fine for disorderly conduct, according to the statute, ranges from $5 to $25, upsetting the sentence pronounced yesterday, Luckett claims.

Comphor is alleged to have struck George Finger, a councilman of the town, while Finger was investigating a complaint about drainage. An original warrant charging assault was withdrawn, and the disorderly conduct charge substituted.

A suit for property damages of $78 was argued yesterday in Capitol Heights Police Court before Judge J. Chew Sheriff, George Wheeler claiming that amount for damages to his machine when in an accident with a truck owned by Margaret Day on December 23.

The crash occurred on Benning road near the power plant, according to Attorney Thomas J. Luckett, who appeared for the woman. He argued that Charles Ward, who drove the truck, was not an employe of the woman, and that she was not responsible for his actions.

Judge Sheriff will render a decision in a few days, he said.

A suit for absolute divorce was filed yesterday by Mrs. Mildred K. Pierce, of Washington, against Clarence M. Pierce, of Bradbury Heights. She alleges that he deserted her in 1926, ten years after they were married.

They have one child, and she asks the court to award her the custody of it. Attorney Arthur C. Keefer appears for her.

APPLE GROWERS HIT BY ARGENTINE RULE

Virginia Orchardists Seek Stimson's Aid to Have Order Revised.

Special to The Washington Post.

Winchester, Va., May 28.—A recent concession of the Argentine government permitting American apple growers to ship their products to Argentina in barrels and bushel baskets, as well as the standard box, is so restricted that doubt was expressed today by growers as to whether they will use the right to ship.

In fact, they said it was well-nigh impossible for growers to comply with the rigid requirements of the Buenos Aires government, and as the matter stands growers are in no more favorable position than they were a year ago with respect to shipments to Argentina.

Representatives of Virginia and Maryland fruit interests, in conference with Secretary Stimson in Washington a few days ago, said he informed them Argentina had agreed to admit apples in barrels and baskets. But, they said, all such apples would have to be individually wrapped in a silky waterproof paper. This, they said, would have the effect of excluding the barrel, as packing apples in a barrel in such manner for long voyages was virtually impossible. The fruit could not be packed tightly if each apple was wrapped in paper, they explained.

In addition, the regulations provide that if one apple is found to be infected, the entire shipment is to be incinerated, without indemnification to the shipper. Growers said these provisions arbitrarily excluded apples from Virginia and no doubt many other States, because of the impossibility of making shipments entirely and wholly free of a single infestation.

Secretary Stimson has been asked to obtain, if possible, modification of the inspection restriction to allow the same tolerance as was permitted last year.

Secretary Stimson also has been requested to use his influence to have shredded oiled paper substituted for the silky waterproof paper wrapper.

Growers declared the restrictions have been placed on fruit by Argentina in retaliation for restrictions and embargoes imposed by the United States Government upon importation of certain products from the South American republic.

Teacher Is Found Dead at Annapolis

Miss Linthicum, 53, Held Heart-Failure Victim by Physicians.

Special to the Washington Post.

Annapolis, Md., May 28.—Miss Louise W. Linthicum, 53 years old, for the last four years principal of the Arundel High School, and for 15 years prior to that, principal of Annapolis High School, was found dead in bed at her residence here this morning.

Physicians ascribed her death to heart failure. Her health had not been the best since she was compelled to relinquish the more burdensome duties at the city school.

Miss Linthicum was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Joshua F. Linthicum, of Annapolis. She is survived by two brothers, Ernest Linthicum, of Takoma Park, Md., J. Francis Linthicum, Pittsburgh, and a sister, Mrs. G. Hamman Hopkins, with whom she made her home.

POLICE TAKE SEIZED RUM, JURY REPORTS

Anne Arundel Inquisitorial Body Assails Practice; Asks Legislation.

Special to The Washington Post.

Annapolis, Md., May 28.—That members of the Annapolis police force had been in the habit of dividing confiscated liquor among themselves after it was conveyed to police headquarters, reserving a small portion to be used as evidence, was among the allegations contained in the report of the Anne Arundel County grand jury which today completed its major investigations and filed a report with Judge Robert Moss, in Circuit Court.

The inquisitorial group, of which C. Ashby Duvall, farmer of near Annapolis, was foreman, termed such situation an "amazing attitude and conscience by police officials," and recommended legislation to correct such an evil.

The charges, the report states, was based upon testimony of some of the officers themselves, though no names were revealed. The report further stated that one of the city magistrates, name not given, testified he would like to get some liquor for himself.

The whole situation presents a "sorry plight," the report added, and it was urged that immediate measures be taken to provide for the disposal of contraband liquor, and fix punishment for violation. "No official person of office seems to be accountable under law for the custody, safeguarding and legal disposal of seized contraband articles," the jury said.

WINCHESTER GROUP WINS RIFLE MATCH

Unit of Charlottesville Is Second; Awards Given to Victors.

Special to The Washington Post.

Charlottesville, Va., May 28.— Company I, Winchester, was winner of the 1931 regimental indoor rifle match on May 16, according to announcement by Col. Hierome L. Opie, commanding officer of the 116th Infantry, Virginia National Guard.

The Winchester unit, captained by Paul R. Hartman, scored 1,290 out of a possible 1,500 points. Second place went to Company K (Monticello Guard), of this city, commanded by Capt. Marshall Fletcher. The score was 1,269.

The individual high scorer was Sergt. J. P. Blount, of Company I. He registered 84 for standing, 100 for prone and 95 for sitting or kneeling, for a total of 279 points. A close second, with 278 points, was Private Darwin C. King, of the Monticello Guard. King, who has been a member of Company K only six months, led his teammates, the other members being John A. ZONING APPEAL WON BY COUNTY BUILDER

Arlington Board Votes to Allow $11,000 Residence Addition to Store.

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

The zoning appeal board of Arlington County, meeting last night in special session at the courthouse, unanimously granted permit sought by Charles Puglisi, through his attorney, Thomas W. Phillips, to construct a residence addition to his present store building located in Livingstone Heights, Arlington County. The plans and specifications on which the permit was granted provide for an expenditure of approximately $11,000.

Attorney Clarence R. Ahalt, appearing before the board as a citizen of the county, and stating that he was not there representing any citizens or groups of citizens, sought to show the board that by granting this permit it would be in violation of the provisions of the zoning ordinance and set a precedent.

Ahalt argued that a conforming improvement should not be added to a nonconforming building.

The board held that the construction for which the permit was sought, being of a residence classification, was conforming. No opposition was presented by any adjoining home owner.

Speaking of the meeting of the Arlington Rotary Club, held at the Washington Golf and County Club yesterday, Ashton C. Jones, former president of the Arlington Country Chamber of Commerce, declared that Arlington County, the smallest in Virginia, has developed in the last ten years faster than any other section of like size within the State.

"Arlington County, situated as it is, with three bridges open to traffic leading into the Nation's Capital and another, the Arlington Memorial Bridge, rapidly nearing completion, is bound to continue to grow until within a few years it will be a modern city," Jones said.

Reviewing the last 40 years, when Arlington County was farm land and but few homes built, he said today that with the improvement to the State highways and county roads, schools and churches, Arlington County is one of the most modern sections within the metropolitan area.

In conclusion he stated that with the installation of a modern, county-wide sewerage system, which must soon come, Arlington County will grow beyond the expectations of the most optimistic citizen.

Tentative arrangements were made to send a delegate to Vienna, Austria to atend the international convention which meets next month.

The program concluded with a number of musical selections by Miss Eleanor Furr.

Charles T. Jesse, of Arlington County, yesterday filed with Charles C. Carlin, jr., chairman of the Democrative committee of the thirtieth senatorial district of Virginia, notice of his candidacy for the State Senate, subject to the Democratic primary to be held Tuesday August 4.

The district comprises Alexandria City and the counties of Arlington, Fairfax and Prince William.

Owing to tomorrow being a legal holiday, the county board of supervisors will hold its monthly session today at the courthouse. The board will meet at 10 o'clock in the board rooms located on the first floor.

TWO MEN DROWNED; THIRD BODY SOUGHT

One of Victims Kills Himself; Clothing Left on Bank; Basin Being Dragged.

Two men, one a suicide, are known to have been drowned yesterday, and the Tidal Basin is being dragged for the body of a third man who disappeared, leaving his clothing on the bank.

Leslie C. Frailey, of Embreeville, Pa., committed suicide by jumping into the basin yesterday morning, according to police, while Louis Baillnt, who lived on a boat in the Washington Channel, was drowned while swimming.

Clothing belonging to the third man was accompanied by a note, apparently written by John Franklin, who was rooming on I street near Sixth street northwest. The note said: "Get things away from Mrs. D. and look papers over carefully. I will owe Mrs. D. $3.50 on June 1. Be back some time soon, maybe. No work. Gone fishing." It was addressed to the man's son, W. C. Franklin, of C street southeast, near First street.

Disappears Beneath Water.

Baillnt had lived for several days on a boat belonging to Robert R. Willis, of Eighth street southwest, near H street. The dead man, who was about 25, had been swimming for some time before he disappeared beneath the water and failed to come up.

His failure to come to the surface was noticed by Ruby Lee Willis, 5 years old, daughter of the owner of the boat. She told her father, who notified police and tried to recover the body. He located it, but failed to raise it. It was finally brought up after about fifteen minutes by C. E. Adams, of the Harbor Police, and Roland Ragan, owner of a nearby boathouse.

Baillnt had told Willis he came from New York City, but a card found in his pocket bore an address in Bridgeport, Conn. The man apparently was a good swimmer, but it is thought he may have injured his head during a dive, rendering him unconscious. The Fire Rescue Squad rendered treatment, but he was pronounced dead by doctors from Casualty Hospital.

Note Addressed to Mother.

Frailey also left his clothing on the bank of the Tidal Basin, with a note addressed to his mother, Mrs. Bessie Frailey, near West Chester, Pa., On a driver's permit found in his pocket, however, his mother's name is shown as Mrs. Bessie Simes.

The note to his mother said that "Little Jennie" had died and that "the person" who had written to him had "tried to get in to see him." It also asked if he wanted the finder of the note to get him a lawyer.

The message, written in pencil, was on stationery bearing the mark of the Chester County Prison, West Chester, Pa. The note and clothing were found by Raymond Mavars, 15, of 1468 Newton street northwest, and Christian Caspar, 18, of 922 Sixteenth street.

Garrett, a merchant, was found dying with a bullet in his temple, a rifle by his side and a note nearby stating that things were going against him and asking that he be buried on the farm. The widow and her brother were in jail today at Glenville.

BROUGHT ALARM

RUBY LEE WILLIS,

THE ONCE OVER

By H. I. PHILLIPS

CHARLIE AND JIM.

"THE sun is out!" cried Charlie Schwab;
"It's black as night," said Farrell;
"We're all 'dressed up,'" said Mr. Schwab;
Said James, "We're in a barrel!"

Said Charles, "The tide is coming in;"
Said James, "Where are you glancing?"
Said Charles, "I'm looking straight ahead;"
Snapped James, "You're just romancing."

"Oh, see," cried Schwab, "the sunny skies!—
All clear is the horizon!"
Quoth Farrell, "Quick! The smelling salts!—
And bring Friend Charley some pizen."

Laughed Schwab, "An optimist am I—
Away with all the jeerers!"
Said Farrell, with a bitter sigh,
"You do it all with mirrors!"

"How clear the air! How bright the day!"
Said Schwab, with teeth a-glitter;
"You'll have to pardon me," said James,
And went outside to titter.

"Oh, happy days are here again!"
Sang Schwab, and lit a stogie;
"At seeing things that aren't there,"
Said James, "you have me bogie."

"THE storm is o'er," said Charlie Schwab,
"From Frisco clear to Coney;"
"No matter how you slice it, boy,"
Said James, "it's still baloney."

"Big money's near," said Schwab,
"And soon again we'll blow it;"
"You're full of prunes," said Farrell,
"and
What's more, I think you know it.

"I never saw the fields so green,"
Cried Schwab, "Oh, see the flowers!"
"Tomorrow cold," said Farrell (James),
"With frost, snow, hail and showers!"

"The birds are singing everywhere,"
Said Charles; "All's milk and honey;"
"There aren't any birds," said James,
"And saying so is funny."

"The piping times will soon be back,"
Quoth Charles. "We're in the clover;"
"You're sleeping on your back," said James,
"I wish that you'd turn over."

"There's nothing wrong," said Mr. Schwab;
Said Farrell, "Nothing right is;"
"It's all too thick," the public cried,
"Let's go where there more light is."

A BATHING GIRL'S SONG OF JOY.

"Supreme Court Bars Dumping of Refuse at Sea."—Headline.

BRING my bathing suit, oh, mother!
Better days will soon be here,
When a girl who's been in bathing
Won't come out a greasy smear.

Lead me gently to the water,
Do not blast my ardent hope
That to swim I will have to Fight a sea of cantaloupe.

Whisper that I'm not mistaken—
That the courts my strength will spare
From a struggle to keep grapefruit,
Eggs and spinach from my hair.

Fruit, they say, is very healthful;
Vegetables keep one slim,
Salad's okay in its place, but
It just ruins any swim.
